Night Club Girl Attempts to End Own Life

FIRE VICTIM, ILL, TAKES POISON

Unable to Get $6,500, Despondent Over Long Suffering

Sick, friendless and "broke," Anna (Fifi) Bernhart, 25, the girl who was awarded $6,500 damages for burns suffered when flames leveled the Club Plantation, where she was the cashier, was in Presbyterian Hospital today recovering from what she said was an attempt to "end it all" early Sunday.

Five alleged owners of the Club Plantation—Charles Wolfe, Eddie Klein, Andrew Garavini, John Duffy and Al Steele—recently were held for court because they are alleged to have run the Babcock boulevard roadhouse without workmen's compensation for their employes.

Fifi said she was in Allegheny General Hospital seven months from burns she received more than a year ago. The court later awarded her $6,500. Enid Harris, a cook, was awarded $482.

From roadhouse lights and music to a lonely Salvation Army room was Fifi's fate; and early Sunday morning she drained a bottle of poison on a West Park bench, she said.

She refused to tell police or physicians her name or address. Nor would she explain.

Later, however, she became talkative, saying:

"Why did I do it? Well, you know how it is when you're sick and broke, and no friends, and all that. I can't ever get better from those burns, and even if I could I wouldn't have the money to do it. I can't get a cent out of those men that ran the place. They got too much drag. I know all about them."

AIDE CLEARS DAVIS IN LOTTERY

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—United States Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, divorced himself from "the organization department" in 1930, before the two alleged "lottery charity balls were held, it was testified today by Fred W. Jones, first defense witness called at the trial of the former secretary of Labor, charged with violation of the lottery laws.

During the luncheon recess, motions to dismiss the indictments against Davis and motions to strike out certain parts of the testimony, were made by Charles J. Margiotti, chief defense counsel, and Charles H. Tuttle, associate defense counsel, and Charles H. Tuttle, associate defense counsel. They were denied.

The defense motions included a request for a directed verdict of acquittal by the court. It was also argued that testimony relating to violation of the lottery laws through interstate traffic in the charity ball tickets be stricken out because there was no such statute and if ther was it was unconstitutional.

TELLS OF CONTRACT

The contract held by Davis for organizing the Moose was turned over to Joseph A. Jenkins and Jones at Sharon, Pa., during a supreme council meeting in August, 1930, it was brought out.

The witness testified that a cable was sent to Jenkins, who had the Moose "organizing rights in Great Britain" on May, 1930.

Jones said the cable to Jenkins suggested the latter come home and take over from Davis "the organization department."

The reasons for the disposal of the contract held by Davis with the Moose was given as lack of time for the job inasmuch as Davis had become assured of the Pennsylvania senatorial toga.

Jones testified that after a discussion among Davis, Jenkins and

2 SLAIN, OHIO TROOPS WILL CLOSE MINE

National Guard Sent To Athens After New Violence

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Gov. George White today ordered National Guardsmen to proceed to the Ohio Collieries Company No. 267 mine, near Athen, where continued disorders were climaxed today with the killing of Clarmont Banfield, 18.

Banfield, believed to have been an innocent victim of snipers, was shot 12 hours after Boyd Vincent, 45, an active strike agitator, was slain at Luhrig, also in the Hocking Valley mine field.

Adjt. Gen. Frank D. Henderson announced he had instructed guard officers to close the Ohio colleries and disarm mine guards. The mine, unlike others in the district, declined to accept Gov. White's peace plan, which settled a long strike.

Men ambushed in the hills near the mine had been sniping during the night and the early morning hours. As young Banfield and his mother were preparing breakfast a shot was fired, and Banfield fell dead. The young man was not a miner and never worked in the mines.

Vincent had attended church Sunday night at Luhrig and shortly after he left, two men near the church said they heard a shot. Investigation showed Vincent was dead. Later Cash Tedrow, 38, who worked in the Luhrig mine, gave himself up to authorities. He claimed he shot Vincent after the latter said:

"I'm going to get you."

Detective Killed In Illinois Riot

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A sanguinary street riot in which a police officer was killed and a score or more of other persons injured, two critically, has brought the smouldering Illinois mine war to a new phase of hostilities.

The clash was the first in which the opposing factions of miners

Morgan Partner In London Dies

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Michael George Herbert, 39, partner in J. P. Morgan & Co. through membership in the firm of Morgan Grenfell & Co., died today.

He was the son of the late Sir Michael Herbert, former British ambassador to the United States, and a nephew of Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Venizelos Leading In Greek Election

ATHENS, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—According to latest election returns, the National Liberal party of Premier Venizelos was leading the Royalist faction in the parliamentary election.

It appeared the possibility of a Republican coup d'etat to prevent formation of a Monarchist cabinet had been prevented.

Gasoline Price Cut Cent and Half Here

Gasoline is 1½ cents cheaper today. Effective last night, major gasoline companies in the Pittsburgh district reduced their prices to 16½ cents per gallon for regular and 19½ cents for premium fuels, including tax.

Killifer Hurt In Crash

William (Bill) Killifer, manager of the St. Louis Browns, suffered a broken leg and serious lacerations about the head in an automobile accident near Butler, Pa., this afternoon. He was returning to his home at Westchester, Pa., from Detroit when the accident occurred.

WINS FIGHT FOR RIGHTS OF INDIAN OUTCASTS

Mahatma Takes Food After Six Days Of Abstinence

POONA, India, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi, inspired by news that the British government at London had approved most of the compromise plan of the privileges of Indian Untouchables in legislative elections, broke his "death fast" of protest this afternoon.

Gandhi broke his fast at 5 p. m., India time (6:30 a. m. Pittsburgh time). He had abstained from food six days and five hours.

Gandhi began his self-imposed ordeal at noon Tuesday, as a protest against that part of the recent British communal award which proposed special constituencies for the depressed classes.

COMPROMISE REACHED

Days of negotiations followed between leaders of the depressed classes and the caste Hindus. These finally ended in a compromise plan to which the Mahatma agreed.

The British government this morning announced the acceptance of the compromise plan, with certain reservations, and Gandhi decided to take food again.

In the meantime, his physical strength had been ebbing away and early today his physicians stated his condition was becoming serious.

It was about 4:15 o'clock when they brought him news that the government in London had accepted the compromise agreement.

The little man was so weak that his wife had to lift him up on his cot and prop his back while he

STUNT IMPERILS 'LADYBIRDS'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(Universal.)—Mrs. Louise Thaden and Mrs. Frances Marshalls, women endurance flight record holders, barely escaped disaster in the Flying Boudoir during a refueling exhibition for several thousand spectators at Washington Airport yesterday.

As the Flying Boudoir and its feeder ship contacted for the fueling operation, the two ships hit a "bump" and came so close together they appeared to have locked each other. Both planes were flying too low for a parachute escape in order that spectators might see the fueling.

Mrs. Thaden whipped her ship quickly away, and after a change of pilots in the feeder craft, the fueling was accomplished without difficulty.

Thugs Black Nurse's Eye, Escort Clubbed

Thelma Williams, 20, of Patterson, a nurse at St. Joseph's Hospital, had a blackened eye today because she screamed when two bandits shoved guns through the window of an automobile in which she was sitting in Schenley Park late last night. Her companion, R. D. Bradley, 22, of Coraltown, was struck on the head with a revolver butt.

The bandits fled with the girl's purse, containing $2.50, as motorists attracted by the screams stopped to investigate. Their injuries were treated at Montefiore Hospital.

INCLINE BREAK PERILS SIX

Four women, a child and a man were forced to make a perilous climb of 40 feet up the steep rocks of Arlington Heights when an axle broke on the down-bound car of the South Eleventh Street Incline stalling the cab just as it was making the bend in the tracks this afternoon.

A woman passenger was reported to have fainted.

A laborer working under the incline, which runs from Brandish street, South Side, to Arlington avenue, saw the broken axle and signaled the car's operator to stop.

Three years ago a number of persons were hurt, according to police, when a cable broke on the same incline, which is owned by the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

Escaped Murderer On Way Back to Pen

Charles White, 37, Negro World War veteran, today was en route back to the South Carolina Penitentiary from which he escaped 16 years ago. White surrendered to McKeesport police last Friday. Supt. James M. Pearman arrived today and took White into custody. He had served three years of a 25-year sentence for murder.

Mrs. Borah Aided By Fifth Injection

BOISE, Ia., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of the Senator, seriously ill from psittacosis or parrot fever, received her fifth injection of serum today and was reported improving. Her recovery received a biref setback late yesterday.

CABINET CRISIS RECALLS KING

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—King George will curtail his holiday in Scotland and return to London on Friday, it was announced today.

The news recalled the King's quiet but important part in the dramatic political events of a year ago. It is generally considered that his influence was decisive in formation of the present national government.

His arrival on Friday will follow Wednesday's crucial cabinet meeting when the Ottawa tariff agreements come up for final discussion.

It is taken for granted now in political circles that Sir Herbert Samuel and his Liberal colleagues in the cabinet will resign because of their opposition to these agreements.

Bigham St. Blaze Perils Seven Firemen

Seven firemen were imperiled early today when a wall of a three-story frame building at 128 Bigham street, Mt. Washington, collapsed, showering them with sparks. The damage was estimated at $2,500.

Louis Groth, owner of the building, sleeping on the third floor, was aroused by smoke. Awakening Mr. and Mrs. William Wentz, tenants on the first floor, he sounded an alarm.

'Ice Ball' Peddler Found Dead on Curb

Charles D. Smay, 65, of 1326 Reddour street, North Side, who peddled "ice balls" from a small cart at West Park, was found dead sitting on the curbstone at 310 West North avenue early today. His cart, empty of wares, was nearby.

Police called by two girls passing in an automobile said they found a partly empty bottle containing either wine or moonshine.

Ousting Vets Will Beat Hoover, Says Butler

Marine Speaks Here In Campaign for Roosevelt

Ejection of the Bonus Army from Washington has lost the election for President Hoover, Gen. Smedley D. Butler told the Hungry Club at a noon luncheon at the Fort Pitt Hotel today.

Butler, himself a Republican, his grandfather and father former Republican members of Congress, said he was not leaving the Republican party permanently in supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic candidate, but was joining a new organization.

"The Hoover-for-ex-President Republicans."

Butler said he was for Roosevelt because he had seen him under trying conditions when assistant secretary of the Navy, and believed him to be a man who would attempt to do justice impartially. The claim that Roosevelt was weak and cavilliating, was foolish, Butler said, to any one who had watched him in action.

Dr. Conti, County Medical Head, to Wed

Dr. Eugene Conti, Allegheny County medical director, and Genevieve Keally, secretary in the county supplies office, will be married October 19, in St. Paul's Cathedral, it was learned today.

Miss Keally is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Keally, of 4769 Wallingford street. Dr. Conti, newhew of Commissioner C. C. McGovern, recently succeeded Dr. John B. Conover as county medical director.

Poison Food for Dogs Makes Boy, 5, Ill

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Sammy Trevey, 5, lay ill in a local hospital today while detectives sought to determine the source of poisoned food scattered through the neighborhood in which his parents live. A number of dogs have been poisoned in like manner, leading to a protest parade by children of the neighborhood.

350 Jobless Scots March on London

GLASGOW, Scotland, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Emulating the example of the American B. E. F., 350 Scottish unemployed started a hunger march on London today.

TWO LOSE PLEA IN KLINE 'FIX'

Robert J. Cunningham, whose contracting firm was given many city and county public works contracts, and Charles Flick, Butler County real estate operator, must stand trial at Butler for an attempt to "fix" the Kline-Succop jury, the State Supreme Court ruled today.

Cunningham and Flick had asked changes of venue after their indictment by the Butler grand jury. Both cases will be listed for trial during the December court term, District Attorney E. H. Negley, of Butler, said.

Howard "Buck" Gross, Pittsburgh city employe; Mrs. May Daugherty Scott, wife of a Pittsburgh detective, and her brother, Bert Daugherty, were sentenced following their conviction on simliar charges.

Mrs. Scott, because of illness, was released Saturday after serving three months of her four months' sentence, and Gross has been given a leave of 60 days because of the illness of his wife. He must return to jail to complete his year's sentence. Daugherty is still in jail.

Garner May Talk Here; Mixes Baseball, Politics

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP.)—Speaker John N. Garner, Democratic vice presidential candidate, arrived from Washington today for a conference with Democratic campaign leaders, and while here hopes to see at least one world series baseball game.

Hand said that the people of Pittsburgh want Garner to speak there and that it may be possible that arrangements can be made for this address within the next week.

As Garner told of his desire to see one of the world series games, Hand recalled that Garner, when a young man, played with the Coon Hollow team in the Red River section of Texas.

Asked what team he was going to root for, Garner countered with:

"Well, which team has the greatest number of Democrats? When you tell me that I'll give you my answer. I suppose baseball players are like nearly every other person I have met recently, they are nearly all Democrats. But I guess the best team will win."

Russell Thaw Piloting Dry Crusader

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the Allied Forces for Prohibition, officially began his nation-wide campaign for dry law support when he took off from the municipal airport today for a 1,500-mile non-stop flight to Topeka, Kan.

The plane was piloted by Russell Thaw, son of Harry K. Thaw.

Upon arrival at Topeka, it was said, the Poling plane will be christened in a municipal observance when a former school teacher of President Hoover will break a bottle of mountain water upon the fusilage of the craft.

In the plane, named the "Raymond Robins," in honor of the man with whom Dr. Poling originally planned to tour in the interests of prohibition, and who disappeared several weeks ago, Dr. Poling will cover approximately 26,000 miles in six weeks.

LABOR LEADERS TO DEMAND R. F. C. SPEED STATE LOAN

CUT RED TAPE, WORKERS TO DEMAND

Desperate Plight of Jobless Will Be Outlined

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—John Phillips, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, accompanied by a delegation of labor leaders, will come to Washington this week, it was learned today, to lay directly before officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation the desperate plight of miners and workers throughout 64 counties of the state.

He will point out that the situation in Pennsylvania is worse than in any spot in the union except Chicago.

Regardless of the legal points raised by the R. F. C. and the statement by Gov. Pinchot that it is impossible for him to furnish the information asked by the R. F. C., Phillips will demand that something be done immediately to cut red tape and feed and clothe the many thousands of destitute.

AWARE OF QUARREL

Phillips is aware of the details of the controversy between his state's chief executive and the directors of the R. F. C., according to a spokesman, but believes the spirit of the relief act is being ignored while the letter of the law is being too meticulously followed.

A definite date for the conference has not yet been set.

New efforts to settle the conflicts between Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were begun today with a scheduled conference between Philip C. Staples, head of the Philadelphia relief committee, W. B. Rodgers, director, Pennsylvania State Emergency Relief Board, and Fred C. Croxton, in charge of direct relief loans, and another conference tomorrow between Croxton, and a direct representative of Pinchot.

The controversy now stands: Pinchot has been granted $2,500,000 for direct relief in Allegheny, Philadelphia and Northampton counties. Pinchot has threatened to use the funds wherever he chooses. The R. F. C. says if he does he will get no more funds. Also, he will get no funds for other counties until the relief data demanded by the R. F. C. is finished.

The conferences today and tomorrow may lead to breaking this deadlock, R. F. C. officials said.

PINCHOT SENDS DATA

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Dispatching to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation the requested statistics on unemployment and relief work in Pennsylvania, Gov. Gifford Pinchot declared in a letter made public today that the figures "will necessarily and inevitably be incorrect."

The Governor addressed his letter and the table of information to Atlee Pomerene, chairman of the R. F. C. Board, pointing out that he was furnishing such figures "merely because I wish to leave no excuse for further delay in affording adequate federal relief to Pennsylvania." He added that the letter carried the express approval of the State Emergency Relief Board.

Corporation directors had demanded detailed statistical information of the unemployment situation in each county and the extent of relief granted. Such information was necessary before a loan could be advanced to Pennsylvania, the Governor was informed.

Gov. Pinchot last week furnished information covering three of the counties and the R. F. C. came back by granting an allotment of $2,500,000 and specifying it for use only in the three counties for which figures had been furnished.

In providing additional figures covering the remaining 64 counties in the state, Gov. Pinchot insisted again that the detailed statistics demanded cannot be supplied with accuracy.

Seek Loan to Prevent Relief Failure Here

The County Poor Directors today prepared to borrow money to fill a three-day relief gap due for this week unless Gov. Pinchot and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation straighten out their difficulties.

Maj. J. Clyde Miller, chairman of the board, said last night he was confident that he could borrow money from local banking institutions to fill in the gap—estimated at $7,000 to $10,000 a day.

The lapse is expected to occur when Talbot bill money now supporting county relief runs out Tuesday night. October allotment of Talbot fund money will not be available until Saturday.

AIDE CLEARS SENATOR DAVIS

himself at the home of the director general's father in Sharon, Pa., the contract was assigned to Jenkins and to himself jointly.

The date for this alleged contract conference was set in the latter part of August, 1930.

JONES TAKES BLAME

With this evidence it was attempted to show that Davis unlinked himself from any responsibility in connection with the two charity balls of 1930 and 1931, which the prosecution claims were lotteries.

Through checks traced from the promotion department for the charity balls through the "organization department" into the bank accounts of Davis, the government claims that it has shown the director general profited from the balls by $173,000.

Jones described himself as having been head of "the organization department" for the past few years, since the assignment of the Davis contract.

The contract of Davis with the Moose, allegedly assigned to Jenkins and Jones, was made in 1928. It called for Davis to keep all initiation fees of new Moose members secured.

ADMITS CONTRACTS

The witness testified that he was aware that Davis had a series of contracts with the Moose for "the exclusive organization rights" of the order.

Jones said he carried on the work of the organization department until September, 1930. He testified:

"I used the title of director general of organization for two or three years."

This evidence was the first shot in the battle of the defense in its attempt to prove that Davis had relinquished his direction of the organization department before the two Moose charity balls of 1930 and 1931, alleged lotteries, were staged.

The witness said the "organization department," working out of Pittsburgh, made its contracts with individual lodges.

Davis Defended at Moose District Meeting Here

Lottery charges in the trial of Senator James J. Davis should be pinned on the Supreme Moose Lodge of the World and not on Davis, according to Harry J. Williamson, who was in charge of the Western Pennsylvania Moose Association, District No. 2, meeting yesterday at East Pittsburgh.

Williamson, who is the past dictator of Pittsburgh Lodge No. 46, and who has written one of the leading histories of the Moose, said:

"If I were the prosecution I would pin whatever lottery charges there are on the Supreme Lodge of the World.

"The whole thing is a political game to put Davis out of the way. Davis is wet and Pinchot is dry, and Pinchot has senatorial ambitions. I don't think Davis ever saw any of the charity ball tickets."

More than 200 persons attended the meeting at the East Pittsburgh Lodge. Several speeches were given and a business meeting was held.

An important outcome of the district meeting was the decision to reinstate delinquent members for one dollar rather than the regular $25 charge.

Finds Auto Crash Victims His Parents

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—David Schissel, visiting attorney from Chicago, last night was driving his automobile when he saw two other cars collide. One of them overturned and caught fire. He rushed to extricate the endangered people and dragged an elderly couple from the wrecked machine just before the gasoline tank of the burning car exploded.

Then he recognized the man and woman he rescued as his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schissel, also visitors from Chicago. They suffered minor injuries.

Marine Corps to collect private debts which the country had had no voice in incurring. He said:

"Franklin Roosevelt is a human being, not a slide rule. He believes the nation belongs to everybody. His integrity is proven by his conduct as assistant secretary of the navy during the war. You remember there was no investigation of the Navy Department.

"I don't know where he stands on the bonus. I do know President Hoover is against it. I am for it.

"I have been on 14 foreign expeditions collecting the debts of New York bankers. I don't want my own boys to have to go over the top collecting watered stock of exploiters."

Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence, who introduced Butler, said this was a Democratic, liberal, progressive year, and that Roosevelt represented progressivism, opposed in the national convention by all reactionaries in the party.

Butler will speak in Clairton and Wilkinsburg tonight in behalf of Roosevelt, the Clairton meeting at 7:30 and the Wilkinsburg meeting at 8:30. Both meetings will be preceded by veterans' parades.

Ferrero Sees League Showdown on Japan

TOULOUSE, France, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The newspaper La Depeche de Toulouse, regarded as close to the government, featured today an article by Guglielmo Ferrero, Italian historian, declaring the League of Nations must face its responsibilities and act as judge of whether Japan violated the league covenant in Manchuria.

REED BELIEVED SEEKING AID OF FRANCE

Senator Linked in Secret Pact to Foil Japan

By WYTHE WILLIAMS
Universal Service.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—United States Senator David A. Reed's mission in Paris was not war debts, but an effort to trade French support against Japan for American co-operation with France in her arms policy toward Germany.

These were the sensational whispers heard over the political grapevine system today with the arrival of Premier Herriot, of France, for the opening of the thirteenth assembly of the League of Nations, during which a final effort will be made to drag Germany back into the disarmament parley.

HERRIOT TO APPEAL

Herriott will attempt to convince German Foreign Minister von Neurath that Germany should co-operate with the disarmament conference and the League and not sulk alone because France and Britain have denied her demand for arms equality.

It is in the light of the rumors regarding Senator Reed's mission that the recently changed front of Premier Mussolini, of Italy, is explained. Mussolini, it was said, at first hoped to take the lead in a German-Italian alliance against France, but is now fearful of being dropped under the wheels of the Reich's chariot.

The Italian Premier is also reported preparing a plan for the reorganization of the league secretariat, which would abolish the secretary-general in favor of a committee. This, reportedly because a Frenchman will probably be appointed to succeed Sir Eric Drummond, of Britain, as secretary-general.

No general debate in the assembly on the council's decision to delay discussion of the Manchurian commission's report until November 14 is expected. The Manchurian agenda is expected to be taken up in commissions.

BANKRUPTCY LOOMS

The assembly, although relieved of making an immediate decision on the Manchurian problem, faces a most serious internal situation—bankruptcy of the league.

At the beginning of September, when the year's assessments were due, only nine out of 45 members had paid in full. Of the $1,320,000 necessary to meet the budget, only $560,000 had been paid, leaving $760,000 owing, plus $680,000 unpaid the previous year.

These figures caused the chairman of the Finance Board to inform the League Council in secret session that another such year would force the league to close its door.

Nevertheless, the council declined a gift of $500 to print the report of the Opium Commission on the grounds it cannot accept charity.

Paris Lauds Herriot Talk Against Reich

PARIS, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Paris political circles responded with acclaim today to a speech by Premier Herriot at Gramat yesterday in which the Premier warned that Germany was planning to rearm and proposed that the German arms equality problem be solved by a new security treaty at Geneva.

The Nationalist newspaper Le Figaro hailed the speech as a repudiation of the international policy of the late Aristide Briand.

have engaged in physical battle with each other.

50 IN FLIGHT

The battle began as a group of about 50 miners belonging to the United Mine Workers of America marched from a meeting to their hotel headquarters and they were met by a group of picketers belonging to the Progressive Miners of America. Officials estimated the number of pickets at approximately 800.

A Springfield detective, Sergt. Porter Williams, among the number seeking to restore order, fell fatally wounded.

On the ground, bleeding from three stab wounds, was Garnet Smith, who was later charged with shooting Williams. Smith was a member of the United Mine Workers. One of the Progressive miners, Dominic Dirigalano, Springfield, was shot and seriously wounded.

Among those injured in the rioting were Bozo Damich, 45, of Bentleyville, Pa., international organizer for the United Mine Workers, who suffered injuries to his head and chest, and Edward O'Donnell, of Summit Hill, Pa., slugged back of the ear, but not injured seriously.

Twenty-five persons, including several brought here by the United Mine Workers as international organizers, were still in jail today, booked on charges of rioting. Among them are Damich and O'Donnell; Alex McDonald, Minerville, Pa.; Frank Tomchak, Plymouth, Pa.; John Colcula, Pittsburgh; Frank Dobbins, Canonsburg, Pa.; Frank Sabers, Edwardsville, Pa., and Frank M. Shiffka, Glen Lyon, Pa.

GANDHI BREAKS 'DEATH FAST'

read the official document very carefully.

When he had finished he lifted his head, smiled and murmured to the doctor:

"This will be acceptable."

There was a brief discussion among his friends assembled at the bedside. Then, satisfied that the conditions for ending his fast had been fulfilled, the Mahatma sank back with a low moan.

PRAYERS BEFORE FOOD

But before he would eat he insisted on prayers. Members of the little group sat on the ground about the cot and chanted a prayer led by Rabindranath Tagore, the famous Indian poet, who came here this morning.

Gandhi was too weak to join in the chant, but his lips moved feebly as he followed the familiar words.

Meanwhile a cup of musambi, a sweet lime juice concoction, had been prepared. When the prayers were ended Mrs. Gandhi held the cup to his mouth.

The Mahatma sipped a few drops slowly, then sank back exhausted upon a pillow.

The decision of the British Cabinet in London was announced early this morning after a meeting which lasted until nearly midnight last night and in which Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald participated.

REJOICE OVER NEWS

The news was cabled immediately and was met with great rejoicing. At Simla the halls of the Indian legislative assembly echoed with loud cheers and a similar scene took place in the council of state as the announcement was made.

The government's statement noted that the agreement reached between the leaders here coverd certain questions outside of the cabinet's recent decision on the troublesome electoral question, however, including the actual details of working out the plan and it pointed out that while there was no implication the government opposed these proposals, they were still matter under consideration.

Gandhi had a bad night last night. He slept little, and physicians who examined him this morning said he was sinking and his vitality was lower than at any time since he began his fast.

HEARST PRAISED FOR CENSURE OF HOOVER

Moore, Lehman and Senators Uphold Indictment

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Communications from nationally known men, expressing vigorous commendation of William Randolph Hearst's summation of the case against the Republican administration, were published by the New York Enquirer today.

Mr. Hearst's summation, made in a telegram to William Griffin, publisher of the Enquirer, first appeared in the Enquirer of September 18, and was re-published by the Hearst newspapers.

CALL TO NATION

A. Harry Moore, Governor of New Jersey:

"William Randolph Hearst's message to the Enquirer has brought home vividly to the American people the issues before the country in the present presidential campaign. I hope it may be possible to reprint the Hearst message in pamphlet form for distribution throughout the country.

"Mr. Hearst's telegram is a masterly indictment of the Republican administration and an inspiring call to the nation, in times the most critical in the history of the United States since the Civil War.

"With his eyes fixed on the ends of the earth; with plans for the relief of every country but his own; fishing always in the troubled waters of European political intrigue, President Hoover has forfeited the confidence not only of those who call themselves Democrats, but of those also who trusted to his promises in 1928.

"HOOVER" IS ISSUE

"The people asked for broad and President Hoover responded with declarations on the federal doctrines of an effete Republicanism.

"They asked for employment and he gave frequent assurances that prosperity was around the corner.

"They asked for relief and were met with President Hoover's archaic ideas on the limited functions and powers of the federal government.

"As Mr. Hearst rightly emphasizes the great issue before the country in this presidential campaign is—HOOVER.

"Maine has voiced the feelings of the whole nation. The people possess the power to make federal government responsive to their present needs. What a Republican administration has failed to accompuish, a Roosevelt administration, backed by a Democratic Congress, will carry into effect."

LEHMAN APPROVES

Herbert H. Lehman, lieutenant-governor of New York:

"Many of the instances of Republican failure cited by Mr. Hearst touch intimately the situation in New York state. They undoubtedly will play an important part in the campaign as it develops from now on.

"Among the issues definitely affecting New York state, as cited in Mr. Hearst's letter, all of which particularly engage my concern, are those relating to the question of power; formulation of adequately effective plans for relieving the depression; job-creating legislation; neglect of proper action in the interests of the farmer and the working classes, and, conspicuously, what Mr. Hearst correctly describes as 'the discreditable double-dealing of the Republican administration' on the important question of prohibition.

"I cannot too strongly emphasize my approval of Mr. Hearst's expression on these matters."

CRITICISM UNDENIABLE

United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York:

"Mr. Hearst's indictment of the Hoover administration is unanswerable. It sticks close to the undeniable record. The two issues uppermost in the minds of voters are unemployment and prohibition.

"Respecting the first, Mr. Hoover has been I have once said, continuously wrong, late and futile. Respecting the second his policy has been vacillating and double dealing. Millions of Republicans will repudiate that kind of administration and will join the Democrats in electing Gov. Roosevelt."

Walker, Tardy Again, Delays Ship's Sailing

NAPLES, Italy, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—James J. Walker, who kept many notables waiting by being late for appointments when he was Mayor of New York, held up an ocean liner yesterday.

The steamship President Pierce was two hours late in sailing for Genoa, but the tardiness of private citizen Walker was only partly to blame. After the boat was held up one hour for him it was found the prow was stuck in mud and it took another hour to release the ship.

Just as Walker was about to board the boat he received word from his hotel that a long cable message had arrived for him from New York. He tried vainly to take the message over the telephone and then sent his secretary, George Collins, after it in a taxicab.

When the two finally got aboard, the captain discovered the prow was stuck in mud. Tugs pushed and pulled the big liner until it was extricated.

Tormented by 'Ghost,' Learns Victim Lives

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A charge of assault to kill has been lodged against Robert L. Bell, 27, and Bell, held here for robbery, almost welcomed it.

Charles Woods, night jailer, explained, saying a five-cent sack of tobacco had solved a mystery that baffled Birmingham police four months, and cleared Bell of the belief he was a murderer.

Woods said the prisoner fas exceedingly nervous after receiving copies of two indictments—"letters from Grandma" they call them in the jail. Woods presented the tobacco. The jailer said:

"He appeared awfully grateful.

"'It's that fellow Spain,' he said. 'He keeps coming around every night asking questions.'

"I asked who 'Spain' was, and he broke down and told me he was a man he had shot to death in Birmingham four months ago."

Syeptical of the story, Woods nevertheless wrote to Birmingham authorities. He was notified to hold Bell for assault to murder Joe Spain, a salesman, who, unknown to Bell, had recovered from his wound.

MODEL FOUND HANGED ON HOUSEBOAT DECLARED SUICIDE

RELATIVES FAIL TO SWERVE JURORS

Brother and Sister Held Belief She Was Slain

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Miss Sylvia Rochkin, 23, artist model and school teacher, whose lifeless body was found dangling from a rafter on a houseboat in the Potomac Friday, today was declared a suicide by a coroner's jury.

George B. Speidel, 30, a post-office clerk and married, who shared the boat with Miss Rochkin, had been held since he reported the finding of her body.

The girl, whose home was in Ozone Park, Long Island, was an expectant mother, the testimony showed, and had submitted to an illegal operation.

The inquest was temporarily halted in a dramatic manner this afternoon when the girl's relatives, a brother and sister, openly objected to the preponderence of "suicide testimony" and insisted on questioning witnesses.

This development came just as Sergt. H. K. Wilson, head of the homicide squad, had testified that from his reconstruction of the hanging, he believed it was entirely possible for a nail driven into the rafter to have supported the woman's body until she strangled to death.

RELATIVES APPEAR

At this point, assistant U. S. Attorney Fitzpatrick was advised that Mrs. Laura Kramer, a sister, and Benjamin Rochkin, a brother, both of Ozone Park, L. I., had some questions they wanted asked.

At that point, Mrs. Kramer and Rochkin asked that they be permitted to talk privately with the District Attorney. Instead, however, the next witness, Sergt. James M. Llarkin, was called. He testified that he and Policeman K. G. McCormick, had answered the call to the houseboat.

In answer to a question by Fitzpatrick as to whether he personally believed the nail and rafter could have supported the woman's weight, had she jumped from a chair or other article of furniture, Sergt Larkin replied:

"I do not believe it would have held the weight of the body."

LYING ON MATTRESS

Sergt. Larkin, in answer to a question, also suggested by Miss Rochkin's relatives, said he knew nothing about any sheets or other bed linen. He said when asked were there any:

"No, I don't think so. She was lying on a mattress."

George B. Speidel, 30, a post-office clerk and married, who occupied the boat with Miss Rochkin, had his statement to the police read at the inquest. This stated he had known Miss Rochkin for some time and that she had told him she had an illegal operation performed upon her. When they retired Thursday night he awoke later and found her body hanging to the rafter in the boat's galley. Speidel said in his statement he advised the girl against having the operation.

DEFENDS MATE IN BABY KILLING

HARRISBURG, Ark., Sept. 26—(AP.)—A mother who officers said would rather see her child dead than disobedient today prepared to go to the defense of her husband, charged with beating his 2-year-old stepson to death.

C. T. Sullivan, chief deputy sheriff, announced what he said was Mrs. Herman Ledbetter's attitude as he investigated the death of the baby boy last Thursday.

Ledbetter said the child had been killed in a fall from a wagon, but officers asserted he had been beaten to death. They charged the stepfather with murder. Mrs. Ledbetter said the child "was not obedient and she would rather see him dead than disobedient," Sullivan said, continuing:

"She also asked us to believe her husband's story that the child fell from the wagon and was killed while being whipped for disobedience."

FEAR JAP PLANE LOST IN STORM

TOKIO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Fear that the three Japanese fliers who set out Saturday morning on a good will flight to the United States had been lost in a week-end storm over the North Pacific grew today as no word was received from the plane's radio and the time limit of its gasoline supply was long overrun.

The plane left Samushiro Saturday morning at 5:35 o'clock and was last heard from at 10:10 the same day, when it reported it was 750 miles northeast of Tokio.

Requests were made to the Russian and American embassies that searches be made over Kamchatka and the Aleutian Islands off the Alaskan coast.

RIDING MASTER WINS CHANGE OF VENUE

Supreme Court to Hear Society Girl's Charge He Jilted Her

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Sidney Homewood, young riding master, will go on trial November 7 before Justice Joseph Morchauser on charges brought by Charlotte Gibson, who says Homewood is the father of the child which will be born to her late in November.

The first legal tilt between District Attorney Henry B. Stebbins and counsel for Homewood took place today before Judge Morchauser in White Plains. Robert Finkelstein, counsel for Homewood, asked that the trial be transferred from Rockland County Court to the Supreme Court and that it be postponed until after the child had been born.

He insisted that in the preliminary hearing of the case, Judge J. W. Sherwood, of Rockland County, had made prejudicial remarks to prospective jurors. Judge Morchauser over the objections of District Attorney Stebbins agreed to take the case from the County Court where Judge Sherwood would have presided, to the Supreme Court, and hear the case himself.

However, he refused to defer the date of the trial later than November 7 despite Attorney Finkelstein's objections that Miss Gibson's state of health would act on the jurors and prejudice them against the defendant.

Jeweler-Builder On Trial in Theft

Carl Meding, South Nineteenth street jeweler, who built a 14-room house near Bridgeville with his own hands after business hours, went on trial in Criminal Court today charged with stealing $5,000 of diamonds.

The commonwealth charges he told a story of being held up and robbed to cover up theft of the gems, which he was selling on consignment from a wholesale house.

Jobless in State Fewer in August

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Unemployed persons in Pennsylvania were 2,714 fewer in number in August than in July, the state Department of Labor and Industry disclosed in figures made public today.

The number of unemployed dropped from 1,267,606 to 1,264,892, or 0.2 per cent, according to department statistics.

Weather Conditions.

A high pressure area is centered over the Middle Atlantic coast this morning, highest pressure reported, 30.50 inches, Atlantic City to New York. Another high appears over the Far Northwest. Low pressure, centered over Western Ontario, extends down over the plains states. This distribution of pressure is causing cloudy weather over most of the interior of the country and rain in Western Ohio and westward to the Mississippi and southward over Kentucky and Tennessee. During the last 24 hours rain was general over the plains states and the Mississippi Valley states. Temperature changes were towards rising except in the northwestern high, where there was a marked drop. Freezing temperatures prevail over Northern Montana, and northward over Saskatchewan.

PREJUDICE PLEA FOR LIBBY DENIED

Lawyers Scout Report Of Fearing Racial Feeling

International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Sept. 26.—Denials that racial prejudice would be a ground on which they would seek change of venue in the trials of Libby Holman Reynolds and Ab Walker, charged with the murder of Smith Reynolds, 20-year-old heir to the tobacco fortune, were made today by counsel for the two defendants.

William Graves, counsel for the former Broadway torch singer, and Bailey Lipfert, representing the 19-year-old chum of the slain youth, said their action was prompted by publication in a New York tabloid Sunday of an article stating that anti-Semitic feeling was feared.

The attorneys said they did not believe there was danger of racial prejudice against Mrs. Reynolds, a Jewess, preventing a fair trial to the defendants.

Both Mrs. Reynolds and Walker are at liberty under $25,000 bonds, charged with murder in connection with the young tobacco heir's death.

The beautiful torch singer, now living in seclusion on an estate near Baltimore, is expecting to bear a child in four months.

Trial dates have not been set. Action will be taken late in November or early in December, however.

U. S. BALLOONS LEADING RACE

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The American balloon "U. S. Navy," participating in the Gordon Bennett cup race, was reported over the outskirts of Warsaw this evening, flying southeast at a height of about 2,600 meters.

The "Goodyear 8" piloted by W. T. Van Orman, and eight other entries had not been reported since the takeoff yesterday. It appeared that the American entries were in an excellent position to win the race.

Pinchot Proclaims Pulaski, Arbor Days

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today issued a proclamation calling upon Pennsylvania to observe Tuesday, October 11, as Pulaski Day in commemoration of the one hundred and fifty-third anniversary of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, Revolutionary War hero, who was fatally wounded in the siege of Savannah, Ga.

3 Arrested Accused Of Cheating Miners

Three men who police said "played" the mining towns with marked cards, victimizing miners in crooked card games, were held for investigation in Central Police Court today. The King's trip was initiated to give new impetus to a campaign to arouse interest in the development and expansion of Italy's African colonies.

Mary Deane Buried At Parker's Landing

PARKER'S LANDING, Pa., Sept. 26.—Mary Diehl Deane, who left here 30 years ago to rise to stardom on the stage, was buried in the little graveyard of the Parker Presbyterian Church today.

From a New York dramatic school she became a successful actress and played the leading roll in "Strange Interlude" last year, retiring to her home here at the completion of her contract. In other years she played with Maude Adams and Robert Mantell. She leaves her husband.

Uniontown Beer Order Stirs Praise, Threats

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Leo H. Heyn, local hotel proprietor who recently "made" the front pages of the nation's newspapers when he ordered 50 barrels of German-brewed beer for delivery April 15, 1933—the date he has set for the demise of prohibition—has reaped a harvest of laudatory and condemnatory letters.

Mournfully, he said today:

"I'm between the devil and the deep sea—the wets and the drys.

"The wets are praising me; the drys are giving me blazes.

"Import companies are offering to bring the beer over; prohibitionists are threatening to sink it in New York harbor.

"Former bartenders besiege me. They want to serve the first Wurzburger and offer to work a month free for the privilege. Dry fanatics threaten to blow up the hotel when the shipment arrives.

Heyn nets a discount of $2 per barrel for his early order, placed with the Holgrau Haus, Wurzburger, Germany, for delivery April 15, 1933.

Rockefeller Home Site Sold for $41.60 Taxes

OWEGO, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(INS.)—The piece of ground where the world's richest man was born, was sold for $41.60 in unpaid taxes today.

Fifty-four acres of property, site of the house where John D. Rockefeller, Sr., first saw the light of day more than 90 years ago, went back to ownership of Tioga County. The property is located on Michigan Hill in the town of Richford, near here.

The property was purchased by a Coney Island promoter in 1930. He dismantled the house to take it to New York for a sideshow exhibition, but his money ran out at Binghamton, where the building was placed in storage.

POLL INDICATES BIG ROOSEVELT POPULAR LEAD

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—A popular vote majority of 4,500,000 for Gov. Roosevelt over President Hoover is indicated by the presidential poll of the Hearst newspapers.

This is about half of the 9,643,272 majority claimed for the Governor by the Democratic National Committee. The committee's prediction was based on $15,593 returns in various straw vote polls.

The 285,448 votes tabulated thus far in the nationwide postcard presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States, show Roosevelt has drawn 58 per cent and Hoover 42 per cent.

1928 REVERSAL SEEN

In 1928 President Hoover and Gov. Smith polled a combined vote of 36,455,975, of which President Hoover received 21,430,730 and Gov. Smith 15,025,245. Hoover's majority was 6,405,485. He drew 59 and Gov. Smith 41 per cent of their combined votes.

The 1932 Hearst newspapers' poll percentage division is an almost exact reversal of the 1928 election vote percentage split. The poll therefore would indicate, assuming the same total vote is cast this November as four years ago, that Gov. Roosevelt is in line to receive approximately the same poular vote that President Hoover did in 1928, and that Hoover's vote will aproximate the 1928 vote of Gov. Smith.

In other words Roosevelt, on the 58-42 per cent division, would draw 21,144,465 and Hoover 15,301,510, a Roosevelt majority of 5,842,955.

STATE TOTALS STUDIED

When the poll ballots are studied by individual states rather than by the country as a whole, a reduction of some 900,000 shows up in the potential Roosevelt majority. Taking the ballots for each state, dividing them on a percentage basis and applying those percentage figures to the state's actual 1928 vote totals, Roosevelt receives state totals aggregating 20,717,235 and Hoover 15,738,740, a net Roosevelt majority of 4,978,495.

Breaking down these state totals to individual counties and congressional districts, a further downward adjustment is observed when the percentage calculations are applied. Estimating this at 10 per cent, which test calculations have indicated to be a fair average of adjustment, the Roosevelt majority comes down to 4,480,645, a conservative estimate based on poll figures at this time.

Presidential Trend by States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

FARWEST AIDS ROOSEVELT

By COLE E. MORGAN,
Universal Servic.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Six weeks before the election, the far West appears safe for Gov. Roosevelt.

The 11 states of the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast region with one exception, Colorado, are shown to be leaning to the Democratic nominee by a three to two sectional margin.

With 40,022 post card ballots tabulated from the far West in the national presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States, Roosevelt has to his credit exactly 60 per cent of the total.

To date there have been tabulated 285,448 ballots of which Roosevelt has drawn 58 per cent, His nationwide majority is 47,916, of which he acquired 8,073 out of the 53,697 during the week.

NORRIS, CHILD AID ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Organization of the National Progressive League, under the chairmanship of Senator George W. Norris, progressive Republican from Nebraska, to support the presidential candidacy of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt is announced. Senator Norris will make a coast-to-coast tour beginning October 15.

Dates for other speakers, including Mayor Frank Murphy, of Detroit, Bainbridge Colby, former secretary of state, and Amos Pinchot, of New York, are being arranged, according to Frederick C. Howe, secretary of the league.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A nationwide Republicans-for-Roosevelt League made its debut here today under the chairmanship of Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, lifelong Republican, and a Hoover supporter in the 1928 campaign.

GOV. ROOSEVELT RESTS ON WAY BACK EAST

By ROBERT BARRY
Universal Service.

EN ROUTE WITH GOV. ROOSEVELT, Sept. 26.—Franklin D. Roosevelt today had started back East, carrying with him popular testimony of political support such as no other Democratic candidate for the White House ever was accorded in California, home state of President Hoover.

Nothing which has happened since his nomination at Chicago afforded the Democratic nominee any greater pleasure than the tumultuous greeting accorded him in Los Angeles.

That magnificent spectacle in the Olympic Stadium, the electrical pageant staged by the motion picture industry in association with the Marion Davies Foundation for Crippled Children, was the sort of a show only the genius of Los Angeles could stage.

ENJOYS PAGEANT

Scheduled to remain there a few minutes, Gov. Roosevelt stayed through the whole awe-inspiring pageant, sharing with 90,000 others in the Olympic Stadium the delights of an unforgetable evening.

Roosevelt came to Arizona for 36 hours of rest from politics. His train paused last night at Williams, Ariz., to afford him an opportunity to accept the hospitality of a long-time friend of his wife, Mrs. John C. Greenway, who was a bridesmaid at his wedding.

Mrs. Roosevelt rejoined her husband in this state and was an eager happy listener to the stories told her of this transcontinental tour by her husband, her daughter, Mrs. Curtis Dall, and one of her sons, James Roosevelt.

Roosevelt will remain on the Greenway ranch until tomorrow morning. He will go to Albuquerque, N. M., where Senator Bronson Cutting, a Progressive Republican, has joined Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, in going as far as possible, short of an actual bolt from the Republican party, in subscribing to the philosophy of government Roosevent has been enunciating on his trip.

WILL MEET NORRIS

This week will find Roosevelt back in Chicago, where he was nominated. He will have two important speeches meantime. He will stop his train at McCook, Neb., for a chat with Senator George W. Norris, the veteran progressive Republican.

The speech at Sioux City, Ia., may be regarded as almost a joint debate with Roosevelt's chief rival for the presidency in the farm strike area, because Hoover is scheduled to speak at Des Moines a few days later.

Gov. Roosevelt was able to start East with the assurance of Southern Californians that while the state is normally Republican by 500,000 votes, this is no normal year. He was informed on all sides that the support accorded him by the Hearst newspapers in California meant all the difference in the world as far as California is concerned.

One More Chance To Register for Election

Residents of cities in Allegheny County who have been assessed, still have one chance to qualify in order to vote at the November election.

October 8 will be the third and last registration day in the cities. This is also the last day to pay poll taxes. Only those regularly assessed can pay taxes.

September 7 was the last day to be assessed.

NO DRY CHANGE SEEN BY CURTIS

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Vice President Charles Curtis stopped in Cincinnati last night, en route from Louisville, Ky., to Parkersburg, W. Va.

He planned to confer with Republican leaders in Cincinnati and to continue to Parkersburg today. The Vice President Saturday night completed a campaign tour of four Kentucky cities.

The Enquirer said Curtis was asked on arrival here what the next session of Congress would do regarding prohibition, and that he replied:

"What is there that can be done about that in a short session that was not already done in the last session?"

MAH LI KIM FROM THE LAND OF GORGEOUS SILK
STOCKING RUNS

Beautiful LI KIM has many rich mandarin coats and ceremonial robes, as well as charming American costumes. "In Chinese homes, as in America," she says, "Lux is standard for washing silks."

Miss Mah Li Kim, talented Chinese beauty, is now studying art in New York City. Her father is the manager of a large silk firm. Like all high caste Chinese, she is a connoisseur of silks and knows the best way to care for them . . .

"MY father has taught me how to judge silks and care for them," says this slim, exotic girl of the Orient. "Silk—seemingly so fragile—is really a tough, strong fibre when it is new, because of its elasticity.

"Chinese women teach their servants to wash silk the way that preserves this very precious elasticity—with Lux.

"Would you like to know my method for washing silk stockings? It's easy, and it doubles their wear.

"My 2-Minute Way"

"I take one teaspoon of Lux for each pair, add lukewarm water to Lux, press the suds very gently through the stockings, rinse well."

Thrifty American girls, too, wash stockings this 2-minute Lux way each night. It cuts down stocking runs, because when the silk keeps its elastic quality, it gives under strain—doesn't break. Cake-soap rubbing and soaps containing harmful alkali too often destroy elasticity. Avoid them! Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

Try Lux FREE! Try this wonderful care for your stockings at our expense. Just send us your name and address, and by return mail you will receive a full-sized package of Lux free. Write today to Lever Brothers Co., Dept. KX-1, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

HOOVER TALKS OVER SPEECH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—President Hoover and Secretary Mills today discussed speeches they will deliver during the Republican campaign.

The treasury secretary said he understood the President was "well on the way" to completing his first campaign address, scheduled for delivery at Des Moines, Ia., on Tuesday, October 4. He declined, however, to comment upon the subject matter of Mrs. Hoover's speech.

Mills said they also had discussed the series of speeches he himself is to deliver, beginning at Detroit on September 29, and carrying him to St. Louis, Los Angeles, San Francisco and possibly Minneapolis.

Mills will leave the capital Wednesday and probably be gone until October 15. Mrs. Mills will accompany him.

Tooth Pulled, Hyde To Resume Campaign

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Secretary Hyde, who canceled an address in Ohio Saturday night because of an infected tooth, hopes to be able to resume tomorrow his middle western tour in the interest of President Hoover's candidacy.

The tooth was extracted yesterday and the Secretary of Agriculture returned to his desk today. Unless some complication arises, he expects to speak tomorrow night at Portsmouth, O.

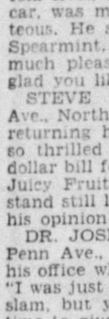
WRIGLEY USERS REWARDED WITH DOLLAR BILLS

Popular Reporters Visit All Sections of Pittsburgh



By MR. SPEAR

Don't think for a minute that Miss Mint and I, and our assistants, spend all our time in the downtown section. Not by any means—we are all over Pittsburgh and vicinity. Ambridge, Braddock, Wilkinsburg, Dormont and the North Side were the scenes of our activity on Saturday.

I don't care where you are—we will find you. Sitting on the porch at home—on the street—waiting for a car—in stores or offices—you are never safe. Miss Mint and I are apt to stop and ask you any time, anywhere, "Have you a package of Wrigley's?" That's the moment you have been waiting for, and that's the time to have Wrigley's if you want one of those crisp dollar bills.

IT PAYS TO BE POLITE

DR. S. R. WEISS, 120 Electric Avenue, was walking up Linden Ave. when I noticed his white flashing teeth. He graciously offered me a stick of Double Mint and said, "I have been a regular Wrigley user since childhood." If you want to keep those pearly white molars, continue chewing Wrigley's, Doctor.

T. F. CLEMENT, 2619 Sarah St., was down to his last half stick of Juicy Fruit when I stopped him. Mr. Clement, who is a barber, said, "Oh, Boy! That was a close shave. Now with this dollar bill I will never get so low on Wrigley's again."

JOHN S. O'CONNELL, 924 Norfolk Ave., a motorman on No. 64 car, was most friendly and courteous. He said he always carried Spearmint. "It makes my job much pleasanter," he said. We're glad you like it.

STEVE PENDRO, 1336 Bell Ave., North Braddock, a little boy returning home from school, was so thrilled when he received his dollar bill for having a package of Juicy Fruit that he could hardly stand still long enough to give me his opinion of Wrigley's.

DR. JOSEPH F. DWYER, 6104 Penn Ave., was playing bridge in his office when I interrupted him. "I was just about to make a grand slam, but you can stop me anytime to give me one of those dollar bills for Wrigley's gum," said the Doctor. Okay, Doctor.

SHIRLEY WRIGHT, 40 Almeada St., Hazelwood, is enthusiastic about Spearmint. She received a dollar when she told me, "Wrigley's keep my teeth so nice and white."

CHARLES SLUDDEN, 4031 Haldane Ave., Greenfield, had an open package of Juicy Fruit when I stopped him. He was surprised and pleased to receive a dollar bill, and said, "I always have a package of Wrigley's with me."

ANNA KING, 1814 Carson St., was in a shoe store when I stopped her. "This is great," she said. "I will use this dollar for a new pair of shoes and will continue to use Spearmint, my favorite brand."

VIRGINIA WAGNER, 120 Newburg St., Carrick, had been stopped by Miss Mint a week ago when she was without Wrigley's. But today was another story. She had a package of P.K.'s and promptly received the dollar bill she was waiting for.

Here are a few others who were stopped by Miss Mint and me in the last few days:

FRED STRITTMATTER, JR., 1703 Westmont Ave.; JAMES KENNEDY, 4128 Lydia St.; EARLE STRATTON, 4928 Glenwood Ave., Hazelwood; LILLIAN GREGG, 405 Silvan Ave., North Braddock; MRS. MARY WANSTABLE, 7508 Dixon St., Swissvale; BERTHA E. MAEGLE, 51 Calhoun Ave.; O. W. CAMPBELL, 631 Maryland Ave.; MAUDE GILLIGAN, 5415 Claybourne St.; P. J RYAN, 321 S. Millvale Ave.

The supply of dollar bills is holding out perfectly. We have enough to keep us busy for a long time yet. So do not be discouraged if you have not been stopped. Just continue to enjoy Wrigley's while waiting for Miss Mint or I to stop you. Always BE PREPARED by carrying a package of Wrigley's. Then you will be ready to give your opinion and a nice, new dollar bill will be yours.

It Is Not Wise To Demand Love From Anybody

Is it unfair to break an engagement?

Suppose a man finds he's fallen out of love with one girl and in love with another—should he stick, no matter how he feels?

Jim thinks he shouldn't, but Patsy thinks he should.

"I love him so!" she sobs. "I have looked forward so eagerly to the time when we would be married and have our own little home nest, and now everything is wrecked! I feel as if I can't live. But he says he can't help the way he feels either. And he won't listen to me!"

Who's in the right? Jim? Or Patsy?

"Dear Sally:

"Please help me, won't you? My heart is just simply breaking, and I don't know what to do.

"The big trouble is that Jim, the man I love and have been engaged to for the last year, says he has changed toward me, and wants to break the engagement. He says that he has fallen in love with another girl.

"We have been going together for two years, and expected to be married this fall. He had been very devoted and sweet to me all the time until about four months ago, when I began to notice a change in him. I wondered what was the matter, but I never suspected it was another girl until several people told me they had seen him out with her.

"I asked him about it, and at first he just passed it off by saying she was a girl his sister had visiting her and he had taken her out to be polite. But last week he came to me and told me that he had fallen deeply in love with her and wanted his freedom.

WANTS TO HOLD HIM

"I was simply bowled over by it, and wouldn't agree to give him up. I told him how much I loved him and tried to make him see how unfair he was being to me, but it just couldn't seem to do any good. He says that he loves her and can't help the way he feels. I begged him to try to see my side and to keep on caring for me, but he says he can't.

What shall I do? How can I make him see what it means to me? I just can't give him up. I feel that I just can't live. All my dreams have gone smash. I have thought of no one but him, ever since he asked me to marry him. I have looked forward to our life together, in our own little home nest. Oh! What can I do? "PATSY."

What can you do, youngster? Well, think it over for yourself. What is there to do but let him go, as he asks? What would you want him to do, if the tables were turned—if you had fallen sincerely in love with some other man? I'll tell you! You'd want him to do just what he is asking of you now—to give you your freedom. And you'd think he was being very unfair if he wouldn't. Now, wouldn't you? Of course you would!

SHOULD FACE FACTS

I know it seems hard, and you have all my sympathy; but you'll have to realize the truth, honey—that love is something that can't be copyrighted. And the fact that you love him doesn't give you the right to demand that he love you in return. If he can't, he can't, and no one can make him.

You see, just now, in your hurt and bewilderment, you're not really thinking of him, much as you believe you love him. You're thinking only of yourself. If you really did love him with a big, deep love, you'd want him to be happy, even if it hurt you. You didn't think of that, did you? Think it over, honey.

And think something else over, too. Here it is. Supposing you could force him to go on and marry you, feeling as he does now. You wouldn't be happy yourself, because you'd always know, down in your heart, that he didn't really belong to you.

Sooner or later you'd begin to resent that, and he would resent the trap you'd forced him into. Then you'd part bitterly. So let him go, bravely and gallantly—and your heart will mend some day.

It's Easy to Envy Those Successful Beyond Merits, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

Many are discontented because they only compare their lot in life with those who happen to have much more.

They think to themselves that they are just as pretty, just as clever, and should have attained just as much.

It is so easy to be resentful of those few who may have progressed far beyond their merit.

But there is one consolation and that is to be as equally aware of the many more who have not progressed at all as they deserve.

You need not look long or far to discover many even prettier, and perhaps cleverer, who have much less than you.

When you consider these you will begin to feel among those who have attained more than they merit.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Physical, mental and emotional poise help qualify a woman to win out in the quest for beauty. They hand Popper Time, that wrecker of good looks, a terrible wallop because the woman who has herself under control, who guards her health, keeps her mind cheerful, who doesn't needlessly fly off the handle, conserves her forces. She cultivates quietness of manner and the calm countenance, not because she is stupid, but because she is wise, realizing that exciting chatter, waving about of arms, nervous movements and general strain and effort are wearing, bring no reward. She will be free of wrinkles and other evidences of superfluous birthdays when she is 100 years old.

Despair not, lady of the oily complexion; your skin may beam, but it is of that class of cutaneous fabrics that won't wrinkle early. Cold water and ice rubs are your beauty friends, and don't forget to tip up the witch hazel bottle every day, pouring a small quantity of its contents onto a bit of cotton, going over the facial coat tenderly, letting the application dry. Avoid pastries that are rich in fats. Remember that fruit juices and green salads are beauty helps.

Have you heard about the halo wave? Makes a pretty girl look like an angel. It is suggestive of a style that was popular in the dear, dead days of grandma's pompadour. The hair is combed back from the forehead. The undulation forms a perfect half circle, starting just above the ears, sweeping almost to the crown of the head, leaving that portion of the hair that is directly above the widow's peak smooth and sleek. A perfect arrangement for the girl with oval face and low forehead. Autumn coiffures are marvelously attractive. Designers have done themselves proud.

Household Hints

It is wise to always have a pound of pretzels tucked away in a tin box. A cooling drink and a few pretzels are perfect warm weather refreshments when the guests are unexpected.

If you find the bottom of a metal vase or lamp is scratching the table on which it stands, paste blotting paper or felt on the bottom.

If you add a piece of lard the size of a walnut to the boiling water with which you make starch, it will prevent the iron sticking and impart an excellent gloss to your linen.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Minimum Bidding

A few of the experts and near experts, who live in and around New York City, carry the principle of Approach bidding so far that they decline to make a Forcing Opening bid with any hand that in itself will not produce game. Their theory is that partner will "give them a chance" on anything but a bust holding. The principle of Approach in bidding is firmly imbedded in the theory of the game, and the only reason for making a Forcing Opening bid of two in a suit that the hand is so strong that the holder cannot vision the probability that partner will have strength enough to respond to an Opening bid of one. When Forcing Opening bids are made only with hands of this type, the bidding is not unnecessarily crowded, and the strong hands facing worthless holdings still have a chance to be played at game.

An interesting example of an ideal Forcing Opening bid of two in a suit, upon which many tournament players failed to get the best result, was played recently at the Tower Bridge Club in New York City.

South—Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 2 ♠ (1) | Pass | 2 N T (2) | Pass |
| 3 ♡ | Pass | 3 ♠ (3) | Pass |
| 4 ♠ (4) | Pass | Pass | Pass |

1—With 6½ honor-tricks, the hand is entirely too big to open with anything less than a Forcing bid.

2—Of course, the obvious response.

3—A close question, but a better response than three notrump.

4—South, even with his honor holding, and even in Duplicate, should permit the play of the hand at spades rather than attempt to count the honors in notrump. Four spades cannot be defeated.

In the play of this hand most amazing results occurred. One young player, carrying the Approach principle to the extreme, opened with a bid of one club, which was passed all around, but surprisingly was defeated only a single trick. Other players opened with a bid of one spade, and none of these had a partner willing to respond with the bust held by North. The honor strength of South was so great that the only means of reaching a game was by the use of the Forcing Opening bid and a nice and accurate weighing by North of the question as to where the hand should be played.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Is the Queen with two small cards a stopper in the suit bid by the opponent on the right?

Answer: It is a possible stopper, but not a sure stopper, for the reason that if the opponent on the left holds three or four cards of the suit headed by the Ace or King, the correct Opening lead is his lowest card of the suit. The opponent on the right would take the trick and lead the suit back through the Declarer's Queen, which would be lost.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Signing Greeting Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Will you kindly state the correct way to sign Christmas cards, if one wishes to use the given names of man and wife? Is it correct to use the wife's name before the husband's—as Mary and William, or should it be William and Mary?

2—In serving a dinner where one has a side dish such as corn, just where is the dish placed by the plate?

3—Is there such a thing as a widow's ring with black edging and diamonds in the center? Is it correct and proper to wear such a ring after the passing of one's husband, or should one still retain the same ring?

D. R.

1—Usually when greeting cards of any kind are signed with the names of husband and wife, the wife's name is written first. Of course, if the wife signs the cards, as usually happens, it does seem more courteous for her to sign her name last, but this sequence always seems a bit awkward, a bit lacking in "preference."

2—The side dish may be placed on either side, whichever seems more convenient. If there is only one glass on the right side of the plate, the side dish may be placed there. But usually it is true, we do find it, when we find it at all, placed on the left side, below the bread and butter plate.

But side dishes are really so unnecessary that nowadays we rarely, very rarely, find them. The items that belong to the main course are placed on the dinner or luncheon plate with the meat.

3—I do not know of this kind of ring, and it would seem in very poor taste, a faddish, bizarre idea.

And why in the world should the widow discard the sentiment of the "real" ring, the one that really is the symbol of the marriage?

How to Keep Well

When a Child Won't Eat, Better Find the Reason

Dr. Copeland

Children's interest in their food is dependent chiefly on three factors. These are the type of child, the general health and the environment.

The stocky child with broad chest and ample abdominal development usually takes his meals as a matter of course. His placid outlook upon life is not easily disturbed, provided his physical condition is up to par and his surroundings are pleasant. Children of this type are easy to manage and to train to proper habits.

The narrow type of child, whose brain and nerves have developed at the expense of his body, is a different problem. He is easily upset. His digestive organs are less vigorous and his craving for food less marked than that of the stocky child. His alert mind finds many interests to divert his attention from the mere routine of meals.

All children suffer at times from minor ailments, some of which cause loss of appetite. A head cold so slight as to attract but little notice, by the flow of mucus into the throat may take away the desire for food.

Constipation is a very common cause of lack of appetite. A body filled with waste products does not crave nutriment. Correct the constipation by a mild laxative and the appetite will quickly return. Many parents fail to appreciate the vital necessity for regular daily elimination.

Septic conditions of the teeth, tonsils and adenoids should not be neglected, for they diminish both vitality and appetite.

Home conditions have a powerful influence upon the nervous system of the child. A nagging mother or a bad-tempered father will make the child indifferent to food and cause him, perhaps, to prefer a hunger strike rather than a meal under such conditions.

Research has shown that an unpleasant incident during a meal, such as a scolding for some breach of table manners or for spilling food, in many cases has caused a child to dislike some wholesome and tempting article of diet, so that he will obstinately refuse to take it at any time afterward. If forced by his parents to eat the food, nausea and vomiting result and all the benefit of the meal is lost.

A poorly selected diet, especially one with too great a proportion of milk, often results in lack of desire for the essential solid foods. An excess of fats, lack of properly cooked vegetables, too much candy or other sweets given between meals, and an insufficient amount of water are among the most common causes of disordered digestion.

One of a mother's difficult problems is the child who refuses to eat. Of several reasons for refusal, one is overindulgence. The child takes a dislike to some article of food and obstinately declines to eat it. As a rule he is a member of a neurotic family, loves attention and, finding that he can be the center of the picture by declining to eat, he plays his advantage to the utmost. Bribes, diversion at meals, candy, cake and promises of desired playthings and outings give him a sense of power.

Such children should not be permitted to feel their importance. When they do not eat, the meal should be removed without comment. Some children court attention by eating slowly, having to be urged to take each mouthful. Prolonged meals should never be allowed.

The obstinate, negative child should be trained in obedience from the first moment this tendency is noticed. There can be no peace in a household ruled by a tiny tyrant.

Answers to Health Queries

Reader, Q.—What causes one to suffer from temporary blindness, associated with severe headache, vomiting and nervousness?

A.—The blindness may be due to the severity of the headache. Make sure there is no underlying kidney condition.

* * *

S. A. M. Q.—What do you advise for eruptions on the face?

A.—Diet and elimination are important in the correction of this disorder. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

NEW PROGRAMS Easy Aces, Cecil & Sally, Drama, 'Caravan' ON AIR

Fu Manchu, Juggernaut, On Air

Dr. Fu Manchu, the "Juggernaut Murder Mystery," Edith Meiser's "Caravan," Easy Aces and Cecil and Sally—these five new programs make their appearance over Pittsburgh stations tonight.

The "Juggernaut Murder Mystery," a 13-episode story laid in the Orient, opens on WCAE tonight at 8 o'clock. The play deals with the efforts of an American girl to uncover the mystery surrounding the death of her physician father in India. The cast includes Ed Harvey, Helen Wayne, Richard Gallagher, Leon Churchon and Sondra Kostner.

Miss Wayne

Fu Manchu, the insidious character created by Sax Rohmer, comes to radio to thrill and chill further the thousands of American mystery fans who have followed his exploits through the pages of half a dozen novels. He makes his bow over a Columbia chain, including WJAS, tonight at 8:45. Charles Warburton, well-known English actor, portrays the leading role. Rohmer crossed the Atlantic to be present during the broadcast.

The bridge-table comedy, "Easy Aces," featuring Goodman Ace and his wife, Jane, returns to the air via WJAS at 10:15.

Lucille Wall and Alfred Shirley take the leading roles in "Caravan," the romantic drama successfully broadcast over a New England network last year. The story, with murderous chieftains and adventure, makes its debut on KDKA at 5:15.

"Cecil and Sally," two young stars whose programs have been featured for the last three years on the Pacific coast, are brought to Pittsburgh listeners via electrical transcription on WWSW at 6:15.

Program Pointers

A musical salute to Waynesburg by the Westinghouse Band under the direction of T. J. Vastine is scheduled on KDKA at 6:15. W. W. Ankrom, secretary of the Waynesburg Chamber of Commerce, is guest speaker.

John Murray, baritone, of Ambridge, presents a recital of old favorites and newest hits on KDKA at 5 p. m.

How to plan meals for the school day is discussed by Mrs. Rowena Schmidt Carpenter, chief of the Federal Bureau of Home Economics, on KDKA tomorrow at 1 o'clock during the Farm and Home Hour.

Beginning today, KQV will carry three daily broadcasts from the Radio Show being staged this week at Boggs and Buhl. The programs are scheduled at 1 p. m., 4 p. m. and 8:45 p. m.

KQV inaugurates its new schedule today, going on the air at 7 a. m. and signing off at 1 a. m., observing silence from 6:45 to 7:30 and from 10 to midnight.

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, of Milwaukee, speaking from that city, tells "Why Milwaukee Has No Gangsters and No Deficit" when he broadcasts over an NBC network, including KDKA, tonight at 8:30 . . . Nat Shilkret's composition, "The Aeroplane," is played by a concert orchestra under the direction of Erno Rapee in honor of the Wright brothers, who flew their first plane on the hills of Kitty Hawk, N. C., during the Parade of States presentation on WCAE at 9:30.

Morton Downey recently resumed his personal appearances and may be back on the air before long . . . Phil Cook, says a report, is continuing his experiments with motion pictures . . . Bing Crosby is growing a mustache.

Johnny Marvin's real name is Senator John Marvin . . . He was born in a covered wagon at the time Senator Gore, the blind Oklahoma leader, was a hero to the Middle West, so his parents named him "Senator John."

The Boswell Sisters leave Thursday for a vacation at home—'way down South . . . While they're away, Ruth Etting and the Street Singer will be heard three times weekly . . . Incidentally, Vet Boswell won't wear a new hat until Connie has worn it once for luck.

Welcome Lewis is said to have turned down an offer to play in a production in Detroit with George Jessel and Norma Talmadge.

There was much competition for membership in the male chorus on that All-America Football Show because the boys figured that by listening to the coaches before they broadcast they could pick up "inside dope" and win a few bets.

Lee Sims and Homay Bailey have signed an exclusive management contract with NBC. In addition to appearing as a team on the air and in vaudeville, they also will be booked singly.

The hard-boiled sergeant in Ray Perkins' "Firing Squad," the device for the elimination of pests, is none other than Paul Dumont, former member of the NBC announcing staff and now an advertising executive.

Count John K. Chapel, whose "Twilight Reveries" programs have long been a feature on KQV, plans to leave shortly on a tour of the country as chief announcer in charge of four daily commercial broadcasts for the marathon dance promoters.

The pause that refreshes

Everything about it is pleasing. It brings a taste thrill — with a cool after-sense of refreshment. Of course it is just as happy an occasion in the home as at the soda fountain. Hence millions buy Coca-Cola in bottles at food dealers to serve at home.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Secretary Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: The pious Fred Stone will soon come out for Repeal! . . . His statement has been in the Democratic party's paws for five days and probably will excite many when it breaks . . . Bettie (Whoopie) MacDonald's book, "Ex-Ziegfeld Girl," due New Year's, is hotter than you suspected—names and colorful items, etc. . . . Her real name will be signed to it—Mary Elizabeth Young. Your item aroused a movie firm. They want the publisher's name—is it Macmillan? . . . Elinson just phoned. Very amusing, too. He said the only mills that appear to be working these days are those four brothers . . . Why didn't you quote Dick Watts more fully on his piece on columnist's movies? I mean the part—"the casting of so attractive a young woman as Maureen O'Sullivan for the role of the columnist's sec'y is in keeping with the demands of realism" . . . The big flirt! . . .

Just for the records, the Ted Blacks are happier than ever . . . Tommy Lyman is back at the Simplon Club . . . Tamara Geva wishes you would say that, against her physician's orders, she appeared in "Flying Colors"—knee trouble, and she danced in agony, and that she felt wretched over what some critics said. I hear she and Garland battled — via phone, that is . . . Mary Brian told one of our intimates that she is secretly married to Ken Murray . . . Poriforget! . . . By all means see "Maedchen In Uniform" (girls in uniform to you!) at the Criterion . . . It's the grandest moving picture yet! Made me cry . . . Takes the very soul out of you, if you have one, of course . . . Donald Freeman of Vanity Fair did the titles in American and a fine job, too . . . It's the most subtle treatment of a delicate subject to date, but it is beautifully done . . . Your stuff in "Portrait" about the husband who left his wife and child brought him back that day! . . . Aren't you the one, tho'!

Well, did you start something—I'm telling you, not asking! . . . With that piece in "Portrait" about the war vets having some difficulty with the privileges out in the new tube . . . Commissioner of License Geraghty feels badly that you didn't write him personally about your complaint, instead of rushing into print with it . . . I told the Commissioner that you merely wondered if it were true, and that he should thank you for tipping him off to any such trick. He seemed very pleasant and wants you to call him, and he doubts very much that there is any truth to your query, etc. . . . Izzy just called again to say that McKee's closing of the Minsky troupes forces those poor burlesqueens to go through a long, hard and cold winter wearing clothes!

It is rumored that Fred Allen took off on a trans-Atlantic flight with no publicity several months ago, or what has become of him? . . . Oh, boss, wait'll you see what this year's winter evening gowns are gonna accentuate! . . . Little Jackie Heller, who is clever and will amount to something some day, has joined your old headache Ben Bernie's show in Chi . . . Al Schwartz says things must be picking up—he was offered a penny for his thoughts. Sounds familiar to me, bay-bee! . . . Edith Mann was in and breathlessly said that Mickey Mouse has moved over to Park Avvenyuh and now has gone so tall millinery he insists upon being called Michael Rodent! . . . Did you know that in the Fort George sector of New York they still pitch horseshoes and mobs come out every wk-end to cheer their favorites?

Tune in on WJZ at 8 in the morning! . . . Swell . . . Called "The Wife-Saver" and is plenty gay even though you haven't had any sleep . . . J. Wald resumes his col'm about radio pipple in the Guide next wk—and will he get even with those who failed him when he lost his whip? . . . Ouch! . . . I told him it was only because he is so young that he takes things like that to heart . . . That when you were ill, and the legend got around you were "done," you found that out! . . . Speaking of people who get the air—on and off the chain stations—Columbia will soon install a mechanical device whereby the chimes will ring merely by pushing a button. Then the announcer can use both mitts for gestures Abe Lyman and Eddy Duchin, both band leaders, but how! . . . are rivals for Hannah Williams' musically-inclined heart . . . Lyman talked for two hours to Hannah via the phone the other day . . . Duchin manages to take her places, though.

The mounted police will tender a "success" dinner to the copper who married Judy Farnham . . . Happens October 16 at Ben Riley's . . . Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, who once were helped by Eva Tanguay, want to appear at her benefit! . . . Pat says she was the most generous woman in show business, always giving to others when they needed it . . . Thomas Meighan, the star, bet on the Futurity and put $5 on Kerry Patch . . . Meighan plays the part of "Kerry" in "Madison Sq. Garden," so he played the hunch. It paid 30 to 1 . . . Wow . . . And Walter, driving along the beautiful roads around the Ashokan Reservoir the other night, we stopped at the hickiest crossroads general store and inn I've seen in these parts and just you guessy-guess what it's name was—"Winchell's Rooms" . . . The boy-friend and I stopped only for gum, please!

Edna Rene phoned. She can make up a sentence containing the word "nemesis" like this—"Nemesis I met that guy, I'm not the same!" . . . And Sidney Berliner toys with "derision" and "asthenia," this way: "That's all there is, derision any more!"—"Haven't asthenia befor?" . . . Are you getting an envious reputation? . . . Frances Hastowsky of the Sherwood Sanitarium (Asheville, N. C.), says that when a lunatic entered a dippy house years ago he would turn his hat sideways and think he was Napoleon! . . . Nowadays he looks through a keyhole and thinks he's That Winchell person! . . . You owe me $7.54 for wires and 3 smackers for the insurance carried by the paper. Kick in . . . Fay King was in. Says she knows you're not a bad boy, regardless. I told her: "Now, no hero-worship, please!" . . . Say! What is this power you have over some women, anyway? . . . As for me, I concur with Oliver Mackey who just was in to say that that famous line ought to be changed to: "The pen is muddier than the sword!" . . . Could I write a book? . . . I'm only kidding, don't get so excited . . . Who was it said: "Tell all the lies you want about me, but heaven help you if you ever tell the truth!"—Your Girl Friday.

Love

New Dietrich Picture in Offing

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.—December may see Marlene Dietrich leave the Paramount lot, but meanwhile there's another picture to be made—and rumor identifies it as an original story by Thompson Burtis called "Undesirable."

If she does the picture, the exotic star again will figure in a drama of the American scene. Her role will be the wife of a bully in a Texas oil-boom town; and the suspense of the plot will lie in whether she murders her husband.

Such a story would be a departure from the early Dietrich vehicles, but the studio believes this to be advisable. In "The Blonde Venus," Marlene Dietrich for instance, you will see a noticeable attempt to quicken tempo and to allow the star a greater animation.

Thompson Burtis is just completing "Undesirable" and studio officials will be giving an early verdict.

HOWARD WON'T SIGN

They were very excited at Fox. Almost had Leslie Howard signed up to play the lead in "Pleasure Cruise." But now Leslie says he is not interested in any pictures after "Animal Kingdom." He wants to go to London and do a play.

This means disappointment for Director Sidney Lanfield. He was on his way to Honolulu—had boarded the boat in San Francisco—when the studio wired for him to come back and confer with Howard.

So far, only two players chosen for this picture are Genevive Tobin and Zazu Pitts.

"Pleasure Cruise," if you've forgotten, is a former London play.

Today is a big day for Al and Ruby Keeler. They celebrate their fourth wedding anniversary . . . So many friends have visited Renee Adoree that her doctor has advised her to go away for a rest. Though feeling fine, she had agreed—and will spend the short vacation on a ranch near Banning . . . This week has seen Hollywood out in force for the matches at the Tennis Club. On Saturday night you'll see dozens of stars at the Olympic Stadium for the Motion Picture Electrical Parade and Sports Pageant. This will be the biggest show ever put on by the film colony. And every dollar of profit goes to the Motion Picture Relief Fund and the Marion Davies Foundation.

Mary Pickford, the Countess De Frasso and Gary Cooper left here yesterday, via United Airport, for a six-day trip to New York. They'll shop and see the shows . . . Clarence Muse is the latest player added to the cast of Paramount's "If I had a Million" . . . Bill Cupples, nationally known swimming star, is seeing the studios and may do a picture . . . After a year at Warner Brothers, Hardie Albright is hitting the free-lance trail. Ona Brown will change her address to a dude ranch at Reno . . . On the morning that Elissa Landi leaves for Vancouver, her husband flies to New York . . . Jean Harlow will sing in her new M. G. M. picture, "Red Dust." Chances are that Rowland Brown will go to New York to complete her next story.

Elissa Landi

'Devil and the Deep' In Sheridan

The feature attraction in the Sheridan Square is "Devil And The Deep," co-starring Gary Cooper and Tallulah Bankhead. Tallulah, handicaped by a jealous husband, played by Charles Laughton, seeks affection outside of home. Gary Cooper is her weakness. The husband finds a novel revenge and it almost works.

Jungle Film In Davis

"Congorilla," in the Davis, the latest travel and animal picture made by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, although much of it is a repetition of what they have done before in bringing the wilds of the Dark Continent before us, is nevertheless highly interesting. Even what isn't new has the novelty of sound. In fact, it is claimed to be the first sound picture ever filmed entirely in Africa.

Pictorially, it is a feast, with many scenes of striking beauty, and of course there are wild animals by the thousands. If you wish to see beautiful birds there is a lake with veritably millions of flamingoes.

Among beasts, perhaps never before pictured in their wild haunts, high in the mountains, are the gorillas, huge apes, largest of the simian tribe. It is indeed a strange sight to see two of these great brutes wrestling and strange, too, to hear their screams and the deep hollow sound as they beat their breasts when excited or alarmed.

Even if you are fed up on animal pictures, you will find it worth-while.

-:- Plays and Players -:-

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

After a long spell of darkness, the Pitt resumed activities this morning, when it again became the home of a resident company. The wicket of the box office was raised and the stage again became peopled with actors. Members of the new Edwin Vail Players organization were greeted by their boss and Eddie, himself, was all ready to put them through their first rehearsal. The initial attraction, Monday, October 3, will be a comedy, "The Bride the Sun Shines On," which in its New York presentation, had Dorothy Gish as the girl adorned with orange blossoms and other insignia of the bridal estate. Here the role will be played by Shirley Booth. Pinned right down and asked to state what caliber his company is, Eddie modestly admitted it is the very, very best ever seen here in stock. Some day when Eddie feels like bragging he'll probably be making a really boastful claim. Anyway, the big army of stock fans here is ready to welcome the Edwin Vail Players and give them a chance to prove that Mr. Vail is right.

Come Thursday and the Nixon box officers will be seating up folks for "The Good Earth," first Theater Guild play of the season and first subscription play of the American Theater Society. It will be presented next Monday with a cast including Alla Nazimova, Earle Larrimore, Henry Travers, Jessie Ralph, Sidney Greenstreet, Clyde Franklin, Edward Nannary, Marjorie Wood, Sabene Newmark, Kate Morgan, Beverly Sitgreaves and some eighty others. "The Good Earth," Pulitzer prize novel by Pearl S. Buck, was dramatized for the Guild by Owen and Donald Davis.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Mazie

PERHAPS IT would be well to start off by telling you that Mazie was very blonde and very dizzy. Not that it has ever been listed as a grave crime to be blonde and dizzy, but Mazie carried the joke too far. Maybeit was because she sat at a switchboard all day listening in on the boss' private calls. Or maybe it was because her father had been a left-handed pitcher. Or perhaps it was because she had been put on a Merry-Go-Round when a child, and someone forgot to take her off.

At any rate she was slightly dippy. And her pet yen was publicity, which proves it. All her life, Mazie dreamt of the day when she would see her name in the papers. Day after day, she looked for a chance to land on the front page with a splash. I know a lot of other people, who aren't supposed to be batty, who have spent their lives in the same way.

However, when Mazie reached the lady-like age of 17 she got a job as phone operator at $25 a week. She worked for the firm of Gershonowitz, Levinowitz, Horowitz and McCarthy. They manufactured buttons for anything from trousers to big mouths. At 27 Mazie was still working at the same job, with the slight difference that the firm rewarded 10 years of faithful service by reducing her pay to $15.

But you can't blame the firm, in a way. They had passed out blank papers to the various employes, and asked for some slogans to use in connection with the business. Mazie wrote "Button, Button, Who's Got the Button" and the cashier was promtly told to deduct 10 fish from her pay each and every week thereafter.

Two years ago, she went out to Rockaway Beach with the avowed intention of rescuing somebody from drowning. Then, when the reporters would swarm around, she'd know just what to do.

She spent her two-weeks vacation on the sands. But every time that someone seemed in danger out in the water, a lifeguard blew a whistle and everything was fixed up.

Two days before she left, she was sitting on the sand wondering how the ocean had ever found the beach in the first place, when a cry for help was heard.

Far out she could see a figure holding a hand aloft. She looked back and found that the lifeguard was busy posing for some fair maidens. This was her big chance.

How she ever did it no one knows. But she managed to reach the drowning man more dead than alive, and immediately started to drown herself. When next she came to she was lying on the beach. The lifeguard has finally rescued her and her companion.

After awhile the lifeguard came over and warned her that if she ever pulled a dumb trick like that again she'd be ruled off the beach.

Back in the office she tried to think of some other method of getting her name in the papers.

A whole year went by, and then it happened. The day was very warm. Mazie was sitting at her post, busy passing out wrong numbers, when Mr. Gershonowitz dropped a lighted match into his waste basket. In a moment, a small blaze was burning briskly.

He ran out of his office screaming, and begged Mazie to phone the fire department. But Mazie was too excited for the moment. She couldn't believe that a fire had actually started at last, so she left the board to take a look in Mr. Gershonowitz's office.

Sure enough. The basket was blazing at its height and the desk and drapes had already started. Mazie went back to the board with a smile, and immediately called the three leading newspapers in town.

"Send your best reporters up right away," she said casually. "There's a big fire here, and a phone operator is sticking to her board to the last."

Then she remembered to call the fire department . . .

The fire department arrived in due time and, long before the hoses were squirting water, men were busy with axes hacking away what was left of the building.

Mazie sat until everyone was gone and the fire was almost out. Then she left her board and allowed herself to be carried down a ladder in gallant style.

When they put her down she rushed to the nearest policeman.

"Where," she asked, "are the reporters?"

"Pardon me," she began. "You boys are from the papers, ain't you? Youse are the gallant knights of the press, are youse not?"

They nodded.

"We'se are," replied one.

"I thought so," cried Mazie excitedly. "Well, youse'll certainly be happy to hear about me. I'm Mazie. You know, Boys. The heroic phone operator who stuck to her board through the fire until everybody was rescued. I don't feel like telling my story, but if you boys insist—"

"You don't have to, Miss," interrupted one of the reporters. "The public has been wise to that line of hooey for a long time and we don't use it much anymore. You gotta give 'em something new now. For instance, take a look at this cat."

He exhibited a mangy-looking feline.

"You know what she did?" He went on. "She rescued her five kittens, one by one, from that fire. And by tomorrow she'll be on every front page in the city!" . . .

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Today I have news which will surprise many of her friends here, fashionables of the older set.

Miss Gertrude Gerdes, who has been living in New York for some time, and William L. Walker, of New York and Boston, obtained a marriage license in New York Saturday.

They plan to be married later in New York, but did not divulge the date.

Miss Gerdes was born in Pittsburgh, the daughter of Frederick William and Mary A. Crawford Gerdes.

* * *

Golf Matches

Even if on Saturday the tune will be "A-Hunting We Will Go," the early part of the week will be "A-Golfing We Will Go," especially for members of the Fox Chapel Golf Club.

And there's promise of perfect weather, too, for the golfers and the spectators, who, and I put myself in this group, rather dread the spectacle of women playing a course under the broiling sun of summer.

Today Fox Chapel has scheduled the qualifying round for the women's championship, and tomorrow the first round of club championship match play.

Thursday and Friday there will be a two-day medal tournament at Cambridge Springs, conducted by the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania.

Travel News

Herbert A. May has been in New York with his son, stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mrs. John L. Porter has been at the same hotel, and so have the H. F Devenses, of the Schenley Apartments, and the Frank Richardsons, of Inverness street.

Mrs. H. E. McKelvey, of Shady avenue, is at Chalfonte-Haddon Hall, Atlantic City.

Many Suburbanites To Be Patronesses For Concerts

'Pennsylvania' Is Theme Of Zelienople Travelers

Mrs. O. W. Zeigler's administration of the Zelienople Travelers' Club, which began on September 12, has "Pennsylvania" as its study theme. Almost every possible phase of the subject will be considered in the papers which the members will prepare between now and the closing session on May 15 when a "See-Pennsylvania-First" afternoon will be enjoyed. Only at the two December meetings will there be a departure and these will be devoted to holiday activities.

Mrs. Zeigler's cabinet includes Mrs. Ida L. Martin and Mrs. Edward Hartung, as vice presidents; Mrs. Zeno Markel, secretary; Mrs. Henry Kloffensteen, assistant secretary; Mrs. William Seaton, treasurer, and Mrs. C. S. Passavant, Jr., critic.

Suburban Hospital Board To Give Tea on Thursday

Miss Margaret Patterson Marries W. G. Johnstone, Jr.

At a pretty ceremony Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the Ben Avon Presbyterian Church, Miss Margaret Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Patterson, of Ben Avon, became the bride of William G. Johnstone, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Johnstone, of Lancaster, Pa. The church was lovely with fall flowers, ferns, crotons and tall tapers placed on either side of the altar. The Rev. Dr. H. H. Forsyth, of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, a friend of the family, officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a smartly simple gown of antique satin in princess mode, embroidered with seed pearls, and made with a V-neckline, long sleeves, and full court train. Her veil of antique tulle, finished with a shirred tulle cap, was draped the full length of the dress train. She carried white roses showered with lilies of the valley, and her only ornament was a pearl pin that had been her father's wedding gift to her mother.

Miss Priscilla Gidney, as the maid of honor, wore chartreuse rough crepe, having a long skirt, puffed sleeves and a tiny jacket and her turban was of brown panne velvet with a fly-away bow.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. David S. Cunningham, of Ben Avon; Mrs. H. Kingsley Elder, of Philadelphia, and Miss Jeanne Leavenworth, of Wallingford, Conn., all wore new blue rough crepe gowns made like that of the maid of honor, and their hats, too, were like Miss Gidney's, of brown panne velvet. They all carried variegated dahlias. Peggy Kelley, small niece of the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Kelley, was the flower girl, and wore a frock of blue georgette with puffed sleeves, and carried an old fashioned nosegay. The bridegroom's young cousin, Jack Renshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Renshaw, was the page boy and wore a black satin suit with an Eton jacket.

In Blue Gowns

Alfred Barnes, of Detroit, served as best man, and the ushers included David S. Cunningham, Dr. H. Kingsley Elder and Lieut. Charles L. Munroe, of Mitchell Field, L. I., and Alexander D. Kyle, of Edgewood.

At the reception in the Shannopin Country Club, receiving with the bridal party were the bride's mother, in seal blue suede lace and a matching turban of crepe, with a corsage of Talisman roses, and the mother of the bridegroom, in black panne velvet with a matching hat, and shoulder spray of gardenias.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone, Jr., left for a honeymoon in Florida, and after November 1 will be at home in Lancaster.

Among the many pre-nuptial affairs honoring the bride, were a tea on Wednesday given by Mrs. H. Kingsley Elder, of Devonshire street, on Tuesday evening a party given by Miss Priscilla Gidney and the bride's sister, Mrs. H. D. Kelley; on Saturday afternoon a bridge by Mrs. David S. Cunningham. Miss Priscilla Gidney gave the rehearsal dinner at the Longue Vue Country Club Friday evening.

12th Ward Voter League Holding Rally Today

Among Voters' League activities of the week is the Twelfth Ward's meeting in the Lemington School this afternoon, which is a rally day with Mrs. Frank A. Bond speaking.

Mrs. A. L. Fillmore, chairman of the Twenty-fifth Ward League, announces its opening meeting in the North Side Y. M. C. A. for tomorrow. Mrs. W. M. Parrish will be the speaker, taking for her subject, "Your Money's Worth!"

The Twenty-sixth Ward League is to have a benefit party at the home of Mrs. Shelton D. Locke, Delaware avenue, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Dormont-Mt. Lebanon League will hold a benefit dessert bridge the same day in the Dormont New Century Club under the chairmanship of Mrs. H. H. Raessle.

A. B. McMurray, a member of the local school board, will address the study group of the Wilkinsburg League tomorrow evening when it meets in the Alcson School to discuss "Borough Management."

Sara Elaine Turner Weds G. W. Kepler, Jr.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. David Howard Turner, of Kittanning, Pa., that on March 10, their daughter, Miss Sara Elaine Turner, was married to George William Kepler, Jr., of Pittsburgh. Mr. Kepler, a graduate of Princeton, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kepler, of the Royal Yorke Apartments.

FASHION REVIVES THE EVER-NEW 'OLD RELIABLE' LACE DRESS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 26. — Paris hasn't yet found any satisfactory substitute for that old reliable of fashion—the lace dress. Further than that, the present version of the lace dress is so suited to the life that modern women lead, that it is made in an entirely different style than its predecessors and may be any one of the fashions in the gamut that runs between the tailored suit and the lavish tea gown.

* * *

THE LACE tailored suit is not only an idea, it is a Paris fact. French dressmakers are designing it as a costume for those difficult hours between noon and midnight, when one may run from a luncheon to a bridge party, thence to a business appointment, with a dinner and the theater after.

* * *

THE GENUINE lacey dress is entirely different from this type of costume. It is thoroughly feminine, frilly and fragile-looking. It may be of black—or better yet, brown or navy—or it may be or pale yellow, orange, green or pink, and be within the rules of Paris correctness. Often as not it is sleeveless, or with tiny sleeves, and wears an added jacket with full or three-quarter-length sleeves.

* * *

ARDANSE MAKES the lace dress with a yoke of flesh-colored tulle so that it looks like an evening gown without really having a low decolletage. She makes the skirt full and ample, and hangs it over a slip that does not quite reach to the full ankle length that the dress attains.

* * *

THE LACE jacket, combined with matching tulle, ties around the waist as if it were a blouse and has full ruffled half-sleeves over some tight wrist-length ones.

A special meeting of the club's music department has been called for Thursday for discussion of the season's plans. A number of department members will assist the chairman, Mrs. Freeman Hammond, at luncheon.

Three P. T. A.'s Start Year Tomorrow

For the first meeting of the Langley Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow evening the theme of the program will be "Know Your School." Mrs. W. E. Brosius will give a preview of the year's work, and the program of studies will be discussed by Bruce Cobaugh.

Five-minute talks on the academic subjects in high school will be presented by Ada C. Park, Anna Slease, Charles H. Korns, Alta Fretts and T. C. Cheeseman, all Langley teachers.

* * *

A reception will mark the opening of the Colfax Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow evening in the school. Mrs. Edward O. Tabor, program chairman, will present a musical program by a trio composed of Mrs. E. S. Tower, Mrs. Ben Graham and Miss Rose Marie Helfrick. Mrs. J. H. Dice is now president of the organization.

* * *

Billed as "the big social, political and entertainment event," "Henry's Wedding" will be staged at the Bellevue High School Thursday and Friday nights under auspices of the Bellevue Parent-Teacher Association. Principal roles will be taken by J. G. Harris, Mrs. J. E. Stewart, Irwin Eiseman, Mrs. Alice Bauer, Oliver Kean, Edwin Schenkel, Mrs. John F. Howe, Miss Jane MacLaran, Mrs. Earl Berger, Mrs. Byron Wade, Wilfred Kuhl, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mrs. Matthew Collins and H. E. Barnes.

* * *

For the first fall meeting of the Schaeffer P. T. A. tomorrow a special program has been arranged by Mrs. W. E. Brosius, president of the City Council P. T. A., as the principal speaker. The meeting will be followed by an informal reception.

* * *

Allegheny County Council of Parents and Teachers will have six meetings this year, the first to be held November 2 at the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

Hundreds Viewing New College Club Praise Committees' Work

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

More than 700 persons, both men and women, dropped in Saturday afternoon and evening to inspect the new College Club. Not one dissenting voice was heard in the general chorus of congratulation accorded the committees who have, in less than a year of actual work, brought to realization a dream of 12 years.

Everything was in place for the formal opening, even to the painting which Mrs. Robert Schmerts has done for the foyer, and the new home was especially beautiful with bouquet after bouquet on all the tables and mantels. Talisman roses in pottery vases were used in the lobby, quantities of dahlias in the club and tea rooms and downstairs in the dining room each table had its individual black glass vase of small garden flowers. The big fireplace is perhaps the most attractive feature of this room. Fireside benches lend an added air of coziness and on the wide mantel are two genuine Jenny Lind bottles and a clock and two small trays of ancient make.

The centerpiece at the long tea table, where Mrs. F. F. Rohrer and Mrs. George M. Swan presided, was of orange zinnias, yellow pompons and talisman roses with green tapers. Many of the flowers were a gift from Mrs. William Reed Thompson, the honorary president, who also presented Mrs. Swan, the president, with a strikingly beautiful arm bouquet made up entirely of white flowers—Roses, dahlias and lilies of the valley, tied with wide white satin ribbon.

In the receiving line were the members of the central executive committee and the chairmen of all committees having to do with the erection of the new building.

Cruise at Y. W.

East Liberty Young Women's Christian Association has chosen a distinctly new idea for its fall opening on Thursday evening. The season's classes and clubs are being spoken of as a cruise and exhibitions and demonstrations of these will be made in appropriate form. Decorations in keeping will further carry out the idea and the "cabins" and "dining room" will be open for inspection throughout the evening, guests being conducted over the ship by the "officers" and "crew."

At 10 o'clock there will be dancing in the ship's "salon."

SPIDER-SNAKE WAR ENDED

ELGIN, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The Elgin version of the spider and the snake war has ended. Roland Swanberg, in whose basement two spiders and a garter snake had waged a combat similar to the one recently terminated in St. Charles, Ill., permitted a representative of the Illinois Humane Society to end the struggle Saturday by chloroforming the reptile.

The snake had been held by its head in the web of two black spiders. The snake evidently fell through the middle of the web, enmeshing its head and carrying the spider cocoon with it. This is thought to have enraged the spiders and in protecting the cocoon they swiftly spun more webs about the snake's head.

In the case of the St. Charles battle, the snake was released after 25 days and placed on exhibition. All observers agree that both small snakes could have been fatally defeated if man had not interfered.

NEWSPAPERS' RECORD LAUDED

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the school of journalism of Columbia University, reported to President Nicholas Murray Butler today that newspapers as a business and an industry, have been better managed during the past year than banks, businesses, industries and the government itself.

The report said:

"There have been fewer mergers and failures, proportionately and no scandals nor financial losses to large bodies of investors."

He declared that newspapers have exerted a sobering influence upon the public, adding:

"That this country should have passed through more than two years of a major depression without widespread disorder is a tribute to the public service of the press."

Sidewalk Liquor Seller Fined $25

Alleged to have dispensed liquor from the sidewalk, W. A. Small, 53, of 228 Brownsville avenue, was fined $25 by Magistrate John J. Sweeney in South Side Police Court yesterday.

Plain Clothesman John Shaughnessy testified he watched Small sell a pint of alleged whisky to William Dethrich, 53, of 335 Moore, avenue, at Bausman street and Brownsville road, late Saturday. Dethrich was discharged.

Paralysis Outbreak On Wane in Phila.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Hope that the present paralysis outbreak was on the wane was revived today when only six new cases were reported to health authorities for Sunday.

Since July 1, 630 persons have been stricken, of which number 70 died.

Starlings Hold 'Fort' In Fireworks Attack

SANDUSKY, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Policemen used roman candles in an attempt to dislodge thousands of starlings from trees in a downtown park here, but the birds last night continued to hold their places.

Guests at a hotel near the park complained they were unable to sleep because the birds made so much noise. The police first tried shotguns, which didn't do the birds any good, nor the would-be sleepers, either.

Man Gives Self Up, Held in Stabbing

Robert Kelley, 34, of 1618 Marquis street, who surrendered to police early today in connection with a stabbing in the home of a neighbor, was held for court charged with felonious cutting by Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Station.

Nicholas Sponcer, of 1616 Marquis street, whom Kelley was accused of cutting in a quarrel over $2 last Thursday, was dismissed from Presbyterian Hospital today. Sponcer's wife was stricken while watching the fight and died in the same hospital, police reported.

Tories Seek Truce In British Cabinet

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Conservative members of the British National cabinet began a concerted effort today to persuade their Liberal colleagues to remain in the government.

It was virtually taken for granted, however, that the Liberals, who expressed much dissatisfaction over the agreements reached at the Ottawa trade conference would resign Wednesday, on the ground that Ottawa agreements could not be reconciled with their free trade beliefs.

Cermak Heads Czech Clubs for Roosevelt

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, was elected president of the National Association of Roosevelt Czechoslovakian Clubs of America at an organization meeting here yesterday.

The announced purpose of the association is to "foster enthusiasm among Czechoslovakian folk of America who have the right of franchise to support Franklin D. Roosevelt for President."

Ford City Priest Reads First Mass

The Rev. Leo J. Ketti, C. S. Sp., of Ford City, a graduate of Duquesne University and St. Mary's Seminary, Norwalk, Conn., read his first mass at 10:30 o'clock yesterday at St. Mary's Church, Ford City. Father Ketti was ordained September 17 at Norwalk. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Ketti, of Ford City, and a brother of John L. Ketti, an operative of the United States Secret Service in the Pittsburgh district.

Flaming Oil Well Causes One Death

MT. PLEASANT, Mich., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—After an all night and half day battle workmen last night had quelled the flaming Reed No. 4 oil well, 13 miles east of here, which caused one death and serious injuries to four other persons.

The body of Walter Miller, 28, who died in the hospital here six hours after being trapped in the fire, was sent to Dawes, W. Va., his former home.

RAILROAD MEN RECALLED HERE

Pittsburgh and Lake Erie and Pennsylvania Railroad officials today admitted they have expanded operations to a "very limited degree" in some shops in this district.

The P. & L. road called men back to shops in McKees Rocks. Refusing to reveal the number, one official admitted it was "considerable," another said it was "very small." The men will be used on repairs, after a lay-off of some months.

The Pennsylvania Railroad took on a few men in several shops. Officials explained that 1,250 cars were taken out of storage in the Western Pennsylvania and Cleveland divisions and airbrake and Journal box repairs will be made. In the Derry and Youngwood shops, 750 of the cars will be repaired. The cars otherwise are in good shape, it was explained.

Professor Uses Slot Machine At Lecture

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The slot machine went scientific today. Dr. E. E. Free, lecturer at New York University, thought it would show something about the laws of chance. The students were privileged to drop nickels in the slot and see what happened.

The doctor, speaking scientifically, said the chances of the students' winning was very "immrobable."

All nickels were to be refunded afterward on account of its being a very scientific business.

PRICES RAISED BY CLEANERS

Members of the Western Pennsylvania Clearenrs' and Dyers' Association today announced an increase in prices with a minimum charge of 75 cents to replace the old minimum of 50 cents. An extra charge for delivery also will be made, it was said.

The increase was decided upon Friday at a meeting in Webster Hall, which brought to a close a series of meetings held in various parts of the state in the last four months.

Crandall-McKenzie and Henderson, Inc., Consolidated Cleaning Shops, Inc., and others, not members of the association, said their prices were unchanged. Their minimum charge is $1, which includes delivery, it was said.

Selling 'Racket' Lands Man, Wife Behind Bars

After nonchalantly signing his name to a contract to buy $7,100 worth of automobile seat covers, Henry Schaier, 47, 707 College avenue, tried to sell Howard E. Wilke, proprietor of an auto painting firm, 5025 Fifth avenue, $7 worth of carbon paper, the latter testified in Morals Court today.

Schaiers pose as an auto dealer was merely to sell the carbon paper, police testified.

Schaier admitted being arrested in other cities in a similar racket. He and his wife, Alberta, were held over by Magistrate T. D. Jones.

Alderman Waives Extortion Defense

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 26.—Alderman William E. Marshall today pleaded no defense to charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged illegal enforcement of the fictitious names act.

Constable James Ellison, of this city, and Morris A. Hecht, Pittsburgh detectives, were found guilty on similar charges Saturday. Sentence will be passed later.

Marshal Falls Dead In Ohio City Hall

SEBRING, O., Sept. 26.—Marshal Charles Baumgartner fell dead while on duty at City Hall early today. A heart attack caused his death. Coroner M. E. Hayes was notified.

Grocer Pays Second Blue Law Fine Here

David Brim, grocer, of 5702 Hays street, made his second Monday morning appearance in East End Police Court today and again he paid a $10 fine for violating the Sunday Blue Law, which orders all stores closed after 10 a. m.

Magistrate Scott Morgan reprimanded Brim after Lieut. John Jones testified he found the store open at 10:45. Several Hays street residents also testified.

Roentgen Group Bans 'X-ray' Designation

DETROIT, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—It's the Roentgen ray, if you please, not "X-ray."

That is the request of the American Roentgen Ray Association, whose members are assembling for their annual convention, opening here today. Use of the proper name, members assert, is not too much to ask on behalf of Conrad Roentgen, discoverer of the ray, who failed to profit by his research and died in poverty.

PITTSBURGHERS FACE HEARING AFTER AMBRIDGE CLUB RAID

COX'S CARAVAN MOVES ACROSS DESERT

Cash From Pittsburgh Woman Enable Group to Eat

KINGMAN, Ariz., Sept. 26.—The Jobless party campaign caravan is moving westward again today. Sufficient funds were received yesterday from the party's headquarters in Pittsburgh, Pa., to permit the tour to continue.

The caravan left Flagstaff, Ariz., last evening after the nine members of the group had eaten their first real meal in several days, and headed for Needles, Cal., 230 miles away.

From Needles the crusaders will move across the Mojave Desert to Los Angeles and thence to San Francisco.

Father James R. Cox, the party's presidential nominee, will rejoin the caravan in San Francisco in time for a Friday night meeting.

Transportation of Father James R. Cox's jobless army caravan from Arizona into California was assured yesterday when a woman member of Old St. Patrick's Church donated $100 to the fund being raised to further promote the priest's campaign trip.

The priest returned to Pittsburgh Saturday night from Arizona, where his party had been stranded due to a lack of funds. Father Cox described conditions in the West as being worse than in the East.

WILLED DOGS, HE SEEKS CASH

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Florence Hunter died, leaving $50,000 and eight dogs. Her husband got the dogs. Now he wants a husband's share of the estate. Besides, four of the dogs were dead when he got them.

In filing notice today that he would contest the will, Louis R. Hunter called attention to the fact that the will left his wife's estate to blooded relatives, servants, the Christian Missionary Alliance, the Red Cross Animal Relief and the American Humane Association, and made no provision for him except for the dogs.

He found four of the dogs dead in the cellar, he said, and had them buried in an animal cemetery where other dogs Mrs. Hunter had owned had been buried.

There is a law in New York which makes it impossible for a husband or wife to disinherit the other. Mrs. Hunter, however, signed her will one day before the law went into effect.

Associate Welfare Chairmen Selected

Mrs. William B. Schiller and D. M. Craig have been named associate chairmen of the central division of the Welfare Fund campaign which will open in November. Last year the division raised $488,892.

Work will be conducted through teams working in allotted districts.

Robber Needs Hat, Passerby Loses His

The chill breezes which made heavier bed clothing comfortable during early morning hours made a hatless robber seek head covering early today. Wendell Moore, of 2431 Wadsworth street, happened along. Moore valued his hat at $2, he told Center avenue police.

2 Trucks Burned In Bellevue Fire

Fire of undetermined origin last night destroyed two automobile trucks in the garage of J. P. McTranor, Ohio River boulevard, Bellevue. Bellevue volunteer firemen extinguished the blaze after damage estimated at $1,500 was caused.

Roomer Vanishes With Cash, Jewels

Mrs. Clara Tebay, of 1002 Bidwell street, North Side, told police today a roomer had entered her room and walked out with $20 in cash, $95 in jewelry and a pawn ticket for jewels on which she had borrowed $180.

5 BANDITS ROB TAXI DRIVER

Five young gunmen whose banditry early Sunday netted them nearly $2,000, got only $2 last night, according to police.

The youths who obtained $1,400 from the office of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, at 214 Lexington avenue, and $500 from Al Rice's Restaurant, 910 Fifth avenue, were blamed for the robbery last night of W. P. Larrimore, of 7016 Hermitage street, driver of a Green cab, at Hazelwood and Greenfield avenues. They got $2 from Larrimore.

Police, seeking the bandits, said license plates on the car were used several months ago by the slayers of Constable Vernon Moses, of Ross Township. The plates, police said, had been stolen from Edward A. Graff, of 622 Shady avenue.

1,000 AT SUNDAY SCHOOL MEET

Delegates to the forty-third annual convention of the Allegheny County Sabbath Association, which opened in the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday, registered this morning. More than 1,000 are expected to attend the sessions, which will run three days.

Speakers at today's sessions were to be the Rev. H. L. Krause, president of the Ministerial Union; the Rev. Dr. John Franklin Troupe, the Rev. Dr. Earl F. Zeigler, dean of the Presbyterian College of Christian Education, Chicago, who opened yesterday's session, and Dr. J. M. McQuilken.

Officers will be elected tomorrow.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 26.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, Mr. Roosevelt has come and gone. Seemed mighty cheerful and happy. That's one thing about a Democrat, they are never as serious as the Republicans. They've been out of work so long they got used to it. The Democrats take the whole thing as a joke and the Republicans take it serious, but run it like a joke, so there's not much difference.

Yours, WILL

Will Rogers

Steel Man's Secretary Blocks Rum Swindle

Frank B. Bell, president of the board of the Edgewater Steel Company, now visiting in London, can thank his secretary for saving him $920 which confidence men attempted to take from him by an old scheme.

Becoming suspicious when a cable from his employer instructed him to pay $920 to "Mr. Martin" for a package of rare old liquor, the secretary, L. W. Engel, informed county detectives, they said.

Twice the sleuths, in disguise, went to places in the city where "Mr. Martin" had said he would turn over the package, but he did not appear.

Friday Engel was instructed by telephone to meet "Mr. Martin" at Center and South Negley avenues. Another call the following day arranged a meeting at the same place, but the engagement was not kept. Detectives believe the plotters were informed that their activities were being watched.

SOMERSET MILK MEN THREATEN PICKETING

Dr. Clyde King Asked To Arbitrate Dispute Over Prices

SOMERSET, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Dr. Clyde L. King, secretary of revenue, has been requested to come to Somerset County to arbitrate difficulties between milk producers and distributors.

A. D. Graham, representative of distributors dealing in Johnstown and Pittsburgh, announced yesterday that Dr. King had been asked to come here. Producers last week said they would picket roads into Johnstown and dump milk if distributors attempted to cut prices, as they plan.

Associated Press.

Farmers' efforts to withhold the morning milk bottle from doorsteps of several large cities today had become the outstanding activity in agriculture's drive for higher prices.

At Atlanta, Ga., protection of a temporary Federal Court injunction was obtained by milk distributors restraining members of the Georgia Milk Producers' Federation, Inc., from interfering by violence with shipments of milk to Atlanta.

RUSSIA NAMES CITY FOR GORKI

MOSCOW, Sept. 26—(AP.)—The great city of Nizhni-Novgorod, chief center of navigation on the Volga River and famous in medieval Russian history, has been renamed "Maxim Gorki," for "Soviet Russia's foremost man of letters," who was born there. The fortieth anniversary of Gorki's literary activity was celebrated yesterday.

His pen name is also to be perpetuated in the city of Moscow, replacing Tverskaya as the name of the main street. (His real name is Aleksie Pyeshkov.)

Joseph Stalin, leader of the Communist party; Michael Kalinin, president of the Soviet Union, and Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the Council of Commissars, sat on the stage in the Moscow Opera House yesterday while honors were heaped on Gorki. The 64-year-old writer, who was seated beside Lenin, was awarded the Order of Lenin.

Kalinin and others extolled Gorki's life and work "in behalf of the toiling masses." Stalin did not speak.

Motorcycle Rider Hurt in Pole Crash

Ward Porter, 30, Negro, of 6424 Deary street, was in a serious condition in the Homeopathic Hospital today with a skull fracture suffered late yesterday when he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed into a pole in Beeler street, according to a hospital report.

ARTISTS HOLD OUTDOOR SALE

If you are thinking of buying a nice big painting or a nice small painting, now is the time, for the bottom has fallen out of the painting market.

That is, they're cheaper than ever, for Pittsburgh's first cut-rate art exhibit opened today on the lawn of the Hotel Schenley.

And the first sale was made for 75 cents. The painter, Charles Derganz, a North Side sign painter on the side, reduced the price from $1 and found a ready buyer for "An Evening in Canada." This painting is deemed rare, not only for Derganz' ability, but because its title is probably one of the first ever to contain that despised part of speech—an article.

"An Evening in Canada" was purchased for Miss Allie Kline, a member of the Hotel Schenley staff and a great admirer of Canada.

The exhibition is for the unknown artist whom legend pictures in a cold garret with empty cupboard. There are several hundred canvases on view and if you have one you'd like to add all you have to do is bring it around.

BURGESS GOES TO PARTY WITH WARRANT

27 Arrests, Liquor Seized When Caul Surprises Guests

AMBRIDGE, Pa., Sept. 26.—Hearings are scheduled tomorrow night for 36 Ambridge Elks club visitors, the majority from Pittsburgh and Sewickley, and Walter C. Bower, 49, of 544 Darlington road, Sewickley, alleged manager, as a result of Burgess P. J Call accepting an invitation to a stag party but presenting a search warrant for admittance.

Twenty-six visitors, taken early yesterday when two barrels of alleged beer, two slot machines, a small quantity of liquor and a paddle wheel were reported seized, were released on $5 forfeits. They were charged with visiting a disorderly house.

Several were from Sewickley district, according to Burgess Caul, while the majority gave Pittsburgh addresses. Eleven Ambridge residents were released on their own recognizance, Caul said. Bower post $110 bond.

Six police staged the raid under the Burgess. Caul said he understood Bower had leased the clubrooms at Fourth and Duss streets and the party was to mark the opening of the new management. Exalted Ruler L. J. Grosdeck, questioned on Bower's connection, said he was employed as a manager.

Hearings will be held before Justice of the Peace J. Vincent Lewis at 7:30 p. m.

50 ESCAPE RAID IN SHALER

While 50 men and women awaited a late floor show at a road house at Evergreen and Weible Run roads, Shaler Township, early yesterday, four county detectives entered, seized Max Simon, as proprietor, and confiscated a large quantity of plain and fancy liquors, they said.

The guests, who made a dash for windows and other convenient forms of exits, were not molested.

The raid was made as a part of the cleanup of booze and vice resorts ordered recently by Judge Frank P. Patterson. Detectives Frank Ritz, Thomas Calig, John Moses and Samuel Riddle made the raid.

Simon was released in $1,000 bond until today, when he will be arraigned for preliminary hearing.

Story of the Old Gray Mare and the Little Brown Hen

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The little brown hen ain't laying eggs. The old gray mare ain't what she used to be. And you've got to be safe in college before you can sing about the farm.

The latest ruling of the Department of Agriculture does the farmer as much good as usual. And that's bad.

He borrowed government money so he could raise a crop to sell. That's his business. A middleman buys it. That's their business.

But the middleman doesn't give the money to the farmer. He first pays off the farmer's loan direct to the government. That's still business.

That's why the little brown hen ain't laying eggs and why the old gray mare ain't what she used to be. There's no future in it.

Jobless 'Cliff Dwellers' Perch Over Second Ave.

Hum of whirling traffic 15 feet overhead and a river view below are part of the rewards for six homeless, jobless men who have become "cliff dwellers" on the hillside high above Second avenue and below the Boulevard of the Allies at Hooper street.

The boulevard's daily traffic passes the camp, which is unseen from the street except to the stroller who might pause and look down through the high iron fence. Two small huts dug into the hillside, two improvised "in-a-door" beds, canvas rolled against the retaining wall in daytime and dropped down at night, and a few make-shift seats compose the furnishings.

The spot was picked because it was a hide-away from curious eyes, a camp member said. The occupants refuse to reveal their identity, preferring anonymity. A cat and a kitten are their pets. Two big stones serve as a fireplace to make coffee occasionally. When a member finds a day's work, the earnings are shared. The campers have been there four months, but expect to move out with cold weather.

JOBLESS GROUP LAYS SIEGE TO RELIEF OFFICE

After visiting several city and county relief offices today, 11 persons who said they represented the Unemployment Youth Committee of Homewood, said to be a Communistic organization, decided to camp in the office of the Allegheny County Emergency Association until a truck was furnished to take them home.

Most of the committee were girls and women from 9 to 40 years old. They first visited the County Poor Board and were then sent to the office of Mrs. Enoch Rauh. Mrs. Rauh told them she could do nothing.

Caroline Decker, 20, of 7841 Susquehanna street, said to Mrs. Rauh:

"We are getting so used to going from office to office that we are becoming skeptical. Now where are you going to send us?"

Wearing tattered clothes, some of them without stockings and with holes in their shoes, they then went to the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

Blonde Caroline, the fiery spokesman of the group, made her pleas once again:

"Look at that little girl—just 9 years old. She has no stockings, has holes in her shoes, and is too hungry to go to school."

The Emergency Association told the youths that they could do nothing, but they took their addresses.

Caroline then demanded:

"All right, we are going to camp here until you do help us or until you send us home in a truck. We're tired of chasing from office to office."

WESTINGHOUSE BUYS COPPER

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—F. A. Merrick, president of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, announced today that his company had placeed orders for 4,000,000 pounds of copper, an amount "far in excess of current general business demands."

This large scale commitment, Mr. Merrick asserted, was influenced by "sound economic factors" and a "firm belief that business had turned the corner," as well as by a desire to stimulate employment in the basic industries.

At the offices of the Westinghouse interests in East Pittsburgh it was said the copper purchase was to build up metal reserves and did not involve employment of additional men at this time.

Economics Classes Will Open Tonight

Classes in current economics, under auspices of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania, will open in the Chamber of Commerce tonight, conducted by Arthur Wood, credit manager of the American Oil Company. ## SOUP MAN HELD PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENT

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Chief Justice Robert S. Frazer, today decided that the estate of the late Dr. John T. Dorrance, Radnor, owes the commonwealth $21,000,000 in inheritance taxes.

OWNED COMPANY

Dr. Dorrance was the owner of the Campbell Soup Company. He lived in New Jersey until 1925, when he built a home at Radnor, Pa., but kept his New Jersey home.

Chief Justice Frazer holds that Dr. Dorrance had his domicile at Radnor, though the estate claimed that his home always was in Cinnaminson, N. J., where he had voted, had paid taxes, was appointed to an office by the Governor of New Jersey, became a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and performed many other acts which New Jersey claimed held his residence in that state.

New Jersey already has collected a collateral inheritance tax on the estate.

The result of the Supreme Court's opinion not only subjects the estate to the inheritance tax of Pennsylvania, but makes his estate subject to a personal property tax of 4 mills on $115,000,000 for the past five years.

LONG FIGHT SEEN

In the opinion of attorneys the case will be carried through to the United States Supreme Court for a final adjudication of the conflicting claims of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The decision of the Pennsylvania high court was a victory for Attorney General William A. Schnader, who represented the state in its effort to collect the tax. The Dorrance estate was represented by former Chief Justice Robert von Moschzisker and the firm of Ballard, Spahr, Andrews & Ingersoll.

State Supreme Court Clears Up All Cases

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court is one judicial body not behind in its work. At the opening of the court session in Pittsburgh this morning Chief Justice Robert S. Frazer announced:

"I am pleased to announce that with the opinions handed down today every case argued and pending before the court has been disposed of. We start this term of court with the docket clear. I might add that the work of the court recently has been greater than usual."

Graves of Indians' Victims Decorated

The graves of Thomas Cherry, and his son, John, slain by Indians near Fort Cherry, Washington County, in 1786, were decorated yesterday by members of the Fort Cherry Association of the Shrines of the American Revolution. The fort stood near what is now Midway. It was built in 1774 and named after the Cherry family.

Descendants who attended the ceremonies and were elected to executive positions in the association were Frank H. Cherry, president; Vincent O. Cherry, vice president, and Mrs. Mary McElhaney, treasurer.

HEART ATTACKS CLAIM 3 LIVES

Three aged residents of the county died yesterday from attacks of heart disease, according to reports to the Coroner. They were:

Mrs. Anna Duffy, 70, of 1728 Canal street, Sharpsburg, was found dead in bed by members of her family.

Mrs. Mary Mootiom, 82, of 95 Kenmawr avenue, Rankin, collapsed in her home and was pronounced dead by Dr. A. A. Wall a short time later.

SEEK CAGNEY IN PICKFORD FILM

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The "off again, on again" negotiations to return the red-headed James Cagney to the films were underway again today because Mary Pickford wants him as her leading man in a waterfront story.

Cagney walked out on Warner Brothers recently when refused a salary raise. Negotiations for his return were dropped last week by the studio, which said Cagney refused to make concessions.

And now Miss Pickford's manager, M. C. Levee, says:

"There seems to be some dispute between Warners and Mr. Cagney as to whether he is still under contract to them."

WOMAN INJURED IN FALL FROM AUTO DIES

Injuries suffered when she fell from an automobile in front of her home resulted in the death late yesterday in Braddock General Hospital of Mrs. Margaret Rassner, 74, a widow of 121 Sixth street, Braddock, according to a Coroner's report.

Three passengers in an automobile alleged to have sped through a stop signal at Fifth and Hamilton and collided with the machine of John Weirand, of 1008 Taylor way, Wilkinsburg, early yesterday, were arrested when they refused to give the name of the driver, who police said fled following the crash.

ARRESTED IN CRASH

Those arrested gave their names as Louis Tommarello, 35, of 408 Lowell street; James Tedisco, of 254 Prince street, and Henry Zolta, 35, of 41 Mayflower street.

Michael O'Toole, 74, of 866 Willow way, Braddock, is in the Braddock General Hospital, with injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile driven by Nicholas Mitchell, of New York, at Eleventh and Washington streets, Braddock, according to a police report.

FIVE INJURED

Blinded by the sun as she turned her automobile from Forbes street into Beechwood boulevard late yesterday, Miss Margaret Kupenberg, 30, of 109 Bennington road, Forest Hills, collided with another machine, causing injury to five persons. The injured are Miss Kupenberg, her mother, Mrs. James Kupenberg, 53; Hilda Lindsay, 26, of 243 Lobinger avenue, driver of the other machine; Ruth Trimbach, 23, of 427 Stock avenue, and Ella Coleman, 19, of Orchard avenue, all of North Braddock. They were taken to Columbia Hospital.

John Hays, 30, of 736 Hazelwood avenue, and Bernard Murray, 30, of 889 Kennebec street, suffered cuts and bruises early today when their automobile, driven by Murray, overturned in Frick Woods. They were taken to Columbia Hospital.

AUTO HITS POLE

Police today were seeking Harry E. Stoker, 21, of 706 Newton street, whose car crashed into a pole on the Saw Mill Run boulevard, last night, injuring three girl occupants. A charge of reckless driving was lodged against him at South Side Police Station.

The girls, Clara Gaworecki, Braddish street; Helen Dennie, 720 Windom street, and Stella Duizek, 509 Behring street, all 15, were taken to Mercy Hospital suffering from cuts and bruises and the Dennie girl from brain concussion. Police reported that Stoker disappeared from a corridor of the hospital and cannot be found. He was hurt slightly.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

MEMBER BANKS REBUILDING RESERVES

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Member banks of the Federal Reserve System are rapidly getting out of debt. Not only that, but they are building up a vast supply of reserve funds, which, sooner or later, can be used to finance the expanding requirements of business.

The member banks are now borrowing less money from the Federal Reserve than at any previous time this year. Their present record is the best since England went off the gold standard last September.

In order to speed the process of getting the banks out of debt, and to build up their excess reserves, the Federal Reserve system last spring embarked upon an unprecedentedly large program of buying government securities.

EASE CREDIT STRAIN

For many weeks, they purchased these obligations at the rate of $100,000,000 a week. In doing so, they took bonds from the member banks, paying cash in return, and in this way loosened credit.

Member borrowings from the reserve banks totaled $359,000,000. This compared with $835,000,000 on February 24, a reduction in seven months of $476,000,000.

Member bank reserve balances on September 21 stood at $2,211,000,000 against $1,878,000,000 on February 24, an increase of $333,000,000.

BUYING LESS GOVERNMENTS

In the same seven-month period, the Federal Reserve banks increased their holdings of government securities from $740,000,000 to $1,852,000,000.

Officials of the reserve bank institutions point to the pronounced easing of credit, as shown in recent bank statements, as an indication that the vast $100,000,000-a-week bond buying program has proven successful. Lately, the reserve banks have not been obliged to buy many government bonds to keep the credit machinery lubricated.

Depression Past

J. E. N. HUME

Mr. Hume, General Electric executive, who points out that electrical manufacturing companies speak of the depression now as though it had passed.

COPPER DEMAND STILL LIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Copper remained quiet last week as producers maintained their asking prices at 6¼ cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley and consumers held off purchases. Although users are said to have immediate needs supplied, producers are reported to be hopeful of improving consumption owing partly to reports of expansion in the automobile industry. The foreign markets fluctuated irregularly and only moderate export sales were reported.

Tin was steadier in sympathy with firmness at London, but domestic demand was quiet.

Lead eased owing to restricted demand from consumers who were said to be generally covered into October. Buying improved moderately, however, at the lower level, although sales were said to be smaller than smelter intake.

Zinc was easier as resale offerings were pressed on the market without attracting buying interest.

EXECUTIVE SEES END OF DROP IN TRADE

The electrical industry is speaking of the depression as though it has passed from the current news into the books of history, according to J. E. N. Hume, of the executive staff of the General Electric Company. There are many indications of the correctness of such an attitude, in his opinion. Aside from the favorable signs in the general business situation, the electrical industry itself is in an enviable position. It is relatively a new industry with a tremendous future. Yet already it has grown in size to a point where it ranks with the really big industries of our time, he declared.

There are at this moment thousands of applications for electricity which are not yet fully developed, such as air conditioning, tube applications, railroad electrification, electric welding, industrial heating and the barely scratched markets for hundreds of household electrical appliances. It is significant that domestic electric current consumption showed a continued increase during the depression. That in itself shows a solid foundation for optimism.

TRAINING VALUABLE

One of the greatest assets of the electrical industry is the assemblage of well-trained men with brains who are concentrating their best abilities on the problems of the industry, Hume declared. Many of these men are with the General Electric Company and are supplying to the world, through this company, some of the greatest scientific advances of this age. In technical work, there has never been a time when so many new engineering developments were under way, he said:

"Our financial policy has remained conservative, as reflected in the net valuation of our manufacturing plant at the close of 1931 at $46,000,000, against a cost of plant of $199,000,000, which compares with a net valuation 10 years earlier of $67,000,000 and a cost of $168,000,000."

EQUIPMENT NEEDED

One of the favorable outlooks for the business is the necessity for wide replacements of industrial equipment because of obsolescence, Hume declared. Business Week on August 7 stated that industry is $30,000,000,000 behind on new equipment purchases. In 1930 a comprehensive survey showed that 50 per cent of the units in metal working industries were 10 years old or more. Even though there were no further purchases of equipment to take care of expansion in productive capacity, it would require eight years of purchasing at the average annual rate before 1930 for American industry to eliminate present obsolescence. Hume said:

"Because of our personnel and our spirit of co-operation, General Electric has been able to hold its own during recent months. We now see ahead a very bright prospect for our own company and for the electrical industry in general. The business signs are extremely encouraging."

TRADE SHOWS SEASONAL PICKUP

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—General business and industry in the United States plunged so unbelievably low by the summer that they put themselves in position to respond to recent weeks to impulses making for normal seasonal improvement. This fact is especially encouraging in view of the absence of seasonal recovery at this time in 1930 and in 1931.

Mr. Rukeyser

Though the business upturn has been slight and somewhat indecisive, there is a widespread view that, irrespective of immediate business trends, a substantial recovery in security and commodity prices was warranted, inasmuch as the bottom prices, reflecting panic and confusion, were too low even under conditions of maximum depression.

In striking off a balance sheet of favorable and untoward developments in trade in recent weeks, the Guaranty Survey, which reflects the careful judgment of William C. Potter, president Guaranty Trust Company and one of Wall street's most capable executives, today points out:

"The upturn in business activity is indicated by numerous reports, some of which are considerably more convincing than others. There has, unquestionably, been a great improvement in all the leading branches of the textile and apparel industries. The increase in foreign trade last month, while not large, is encouraging, particularly the substantial rise in the value of imports. Recent increases in car loadings seem to be larger than might have been expected as a result of purely seasonal influences. Bituminous coal production has increased materially from the low levels of mid-summer. A slight expansion has taken place in construction contracts, and lumber production has gained. The factory increase in factory employment last month suggests a revival of broad scope, though of small magnitude, in the rate of industrial production.

"At other points, there is little or nothing to offer in confirmation of the general belief that a real upturn has occurred. Steel mill activity has shown no more than a seasonal gain, the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Board on sales of department stores shows an increase from July to August of somewhat less than the estimated seasonal amount. Automobile production declined in August and appears to have remained virtually stationary this month. Bank debits fail to indicate any significant increase in the volume of check payments. Electric power output, after rising sharply for several weeks, has declined sharply."

Increase Forecast In Auto Production

DETROIT, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—An analysis of the automobile industry by Frazier Jelke and Company estimates that, contrary to usual seasonal trends, automobile output for September will be larger than August. The firm estimated September production at 95,000 vehicles compared with 89,850 in August in the United States and Canada.

The increase was attributed to unexpected improvement in retail sales and to a shutdown of Ford plants for a period before Labor Day, necessitating accelerated output this month.

'Nerviest Youth' Steals Police Gas

LARAMIE, Wyo.—(INS.)—Louis Selber, a California youth, will be allowed to sleep in the Laramie city jail for several weeks.

Pleading that he had no funds, Selber was recently permitted to sleep in the jail. The following morning as he was preparing to leave, police discovered him siphoning gasoline from the police patrol car into his motorcycle.

WALL STREET HEARS

That the agreement reached on eastern railroad consolidation may be followed by renewed efforts to consolidate the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

That incoming steel business over the next three weeks will largely determine whether the United States Steel will pay its full preferred dividend or will reduce it.

That International Nickel officials report a distinct improvement in tone of their business since the first of the month.

CAN COMPANY EXPANDS

Continental Can Company, Inc., reports the approval of a special expenditure of $230,000 over the next few months on improvements at its Clearing, Illinois, plant, most of which will be for new equipment.

This work, originally contemplated for some time in the future, was approved for immediate completion in order to provide additional employment during the coming months. In addition, the largest part of the company's regular 1932 appropriation, made at the beginning of the year for new construction and improvements, will be expended this winter. This will include the completion of the new three-story modern can making plant at Harvey, Louisiana, and various other improvements throughout the company.

WORLD DIVISION IN UNITS SEEN

LONDON. — (INS.) — Another half-century and the world will be divided into huge economic units.

That is how Lord Melchett, director of Barclay's Bank, visualized the future, when he lectured the students at Bonar Law College.

Declaring that both internationalism and big business had vanished, he said the trend of scientific and industrial knowledge had been to make countries far more self-supporting. What, he asked, is going to happen when this trend becomes even more pronounced in say, 50 years?

There will be a tendency to large territorial divisions; to try to carve the world up into large self-supporting units, large economic units, which have the raw materials, and the right type of population.

A United States of Europe, said Lord Melchett, is inevitable.

Chicago Honors Air Mail Pilot Pioneers

CHICAGO. — (INS.) — Chicago honored the pioneers in the air mail service with an impressive service and the erection of a temporary marker in Grant Park, on the lake front, where the wheels of the first mail plane to reach Chicago touched the turf 14 years ago.

The Chicago Historical Society plans to erect a permanent memorial next year. Max Miller and Eddie Gardner inaugurated the air mail service from New York, flying the distance in 23 hours 47 minutes.

BUSINESS

Glass Industry Will Reflect Progress In Building

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

THE FLAT GLASS industry's share in the coming business recovery is tied up with progress in the building industry. This generalization applies to both plate and window glass. Window glass is almost entirely dependent on building activity. Plate glass is dependent on both construction and automobile output for its markets.

The glassmakers can rely on a certain fixed volume of business for replacement, but this represents only a minor proportion of normal sales. Flat glass is one of the industries which sells only a small share of its output directly to the public. Its markets are bound up with other industries. Both of the principal types of activity which account for the consumption of glass have been discussed in previous articles on the promptness with which individual industries will respond to improvement in general business.

* * *

Building Expected To Respond Slowly

SO FAR AS building is concerned, the opinion has been expressed that response to increased general activity will be slow. A previous column told of the fact that residential construction started to decline early in 1929, even before the general slump got under way. Apparently a surplus of houses was created before over production in other lines became a menace to business.

The surplus in larger structures, such as hotels and office buildings, became apparent at a later time. It appears quite likely that the surplus of structures must be put into use before there can be any great volume of new building.

Finance of both large and small structures also may prove to be an obstacle to new building. The large proportion of defaults on real estate mortgage bonds and the failure of home owners to meet their obligations has created a situation which must be corrected before any great amount of new money can be borrowed for construction purposes. A general business revival undoubtedly will result in increased construction but the improvement in building activity seems likely to lag for a considerable time behind gains in other industries.

* * *

Automobile Prospects Appear to Be Good

ON THE OTHER HAND the prospects of the automobile industry appear to be good. A general business revival may be expected to restore the market for new cars promptly and also to result in the replacement of many worn-out cars which, under normal conditions, would have gone to the scrap heap years ago.

The fact that the plate glass producers have the automobile as well as the construction markets greatly improves their prospects for a prompt share in a general business revival. It must be remembered, however, that foreign competition left only a small margin of profit for the flat glass producers even in the days of good business. Nothing has taken place to change this competitive situation so that the extent of the expected improvement in glass company earnings is likely to be limited by their ability to compete as in the past.

Season's Cotton Exports Expand

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Exports of American cotton last week totaled 129,000 bales against 82,000 in the corresponding week last year, the New York Cotton Exchange reports. Total exports for the season to date were 932,000 bales against 573,000 last year. Movement of American cotton into sight totaled 467,000 bales in the past week against 463,000 bales last year.

Wholesale and Jobbing Trade Conditions

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Tabloid review of wholesale and retail business conditions and the state of crops as reported to Bradstreet's last week from the following centers, on the basis of comparisons with conditions in the same areas in the corresponding week last year:

| | Whole. and Job. Trade | Retail Trade | Mfg. and Industry | Collections | Crops |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Pittsburgh | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Good |
| Chicago | Fair | Fair | Quiet | Fair | Good |
| Cleveland | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Fair |
| Detroit | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Good |
| Indianapolis | Fair | Fair | Quiet | Slow | Good |
| Louisville | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Fair |
| Milwaukee | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Fair |
| Des Moines | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Good |

| Omaha | Quiet | Quiet | Quiet | Slow | Good |
| St. Louis | Fair | Quiet | Fair | Slow | Good |
| St. Paul | Quiet | Fair | Quiet | Slow | Good |
| Baltimore | Fair | Fair | Quiet | Slow | Fair |

Pittsburgh—Tile industry depressed; plate glass demand less than seasonal; wholesale coal slow, but retail prepared sizes get fair call.

Chicago—Recent gains in general trade being maintained; steel mills operating at 14 to 16 per cent capacity; tonnages booked by largest producers best in three months; cattle price advance highest this year.

Cleveland—Textile plants continue on full schedule; paper production active; iron shipments double the August rate; collections hard to make.

Detroit—Cool weather stimulates sales of fall goods; auto industry operating on a slightly lower level; state now harvesting and converting $10,000,000 sugar-beet crop.

DECISIVE WIN SEEN FOR SCHMELING

TWO POSTPONEMENTS OF the big fight finally to be staged tonight in Long Island City may have improved the condition of Mickey Walker, but they have not changed the dope that from the first has indicated he can hardly escape a decisive defeat at the hands of Max Schmeling. Walker has pulled so many surprising comebacks when adjudged done, that he can't be counted as beaten until the fight is over and he is actually licked. But this time the odds against him look too heavy to be overcome.

Mickey Walker

Mickey's heyday is behind him. He will be giving away five years and two months in age, 20 pounds in weight, 6½ inches in height, and 6 inches in reach. He can't hit hard enough to win by a knockout, and there is nothing on which to base a reasonable supposition that he can keep up for 15 rounds a gait swift enough to capture a point decision over a younger, bigger, stronger, faster and harder-hitting opponent. Schmeling ought to win decisively, possibly by a knockout.

THE BASEBALL SEASON that ended yesterday left a trail of high spots behind it. Jimmy Foxx fell just two homers short of equaling Babe Ruth's all-time record of 60, but set a new mark of 58 for right-hand hitters. Foxx also was beaten out by Dale Alexander on the last day for the American League batting championship, .367 to .364. Lefty O'Doul regained the National League hitting crown which he wore in 1929.

Paul Waner did not equal Earl Webb's major league record of 67 for two-base hits, but hung up a new National League record of 63. The Pirates gave an unusual exhibition of in-and-out form. Starting May 19, they won 40 of their next 61 games; then they lost 22 of the next 27 and came back to win 22 of the last 30. Earl Grace, starting in 1931, caught 120 straight games without an error.

THE LEADING PITCHERS of the two big leagues in percentage were a couple of kids, Lon Warneke and Johnny Allen. The A's set a new major league record for home runs by a club, 173. The Yankees played 156 games in one season and 211 in a row without being shut out. The Phillies finished in the first division for the first time since 1917. The Cards finished in a tie for sixth place, a drop by a world champion club equaled only by the White Sox in 1918 and the Red Sox in 1919.

The Cards and Giants, tied for sixth, had been picked to finish one-two. Pepper Martin, world series hero of 1931 with a batting average of 500, hit only .239. The Giants made their lowest finish in 17 years. Alvin Crowder topped the pitchers of both leagues in victories with 26 and won his last 15 in a row. Lou Gehrig stretched his string of games played without a miss to 1,197. The Yankees led, continuously from May 16, and the Cubs from August 11.

THE DOPE THAT the Cubs will be unable to stop the Yankees' five left-hand hitters because they have no southpaw pitcher except Jakie May, a mere relief man, to throw against Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Earl Combs, Bill Dickey and Joe Sewell, is pooh-poohed by Al Spohrer, catcher for the Braves. "It's all rot," Spohrer declares. "All this talk about the left-hand hitters on the Yanks being able to smack the Cubs' right-handers around is the bunk. I get sore every time I hear it. We've got some pretty fair southside hitters in this league—Lefty O'Doul, Chuck Klein, the Waners, Bill Terry, Don Hurst. If the Cubs' right-handers can stop them, why can't they stop Ruth, Gehrig, Dickey, Combs and Sewell?"

Gabby Hartnett

THERE WON'T BE anything wrong with the catching in the world series, in all probability. It will be in the hands of two master maskmen in Bill Dickey and Gabby Hartnett. Dickey is rated the king of them all, and there are few better than Hartnett running around.

At that it will be the first time either Dickey or Hartnett has caught in the title stakes. Bill never figured in a derby before, and though Gabby was eligible in 1929, a lame throwing arm confined him to pinch-hitting roles.

ASKED WHAT WOULD be the greatest of all world series thrills to him, Hartnett said the one to top the list would be to hear a third strike on Babe Ruth go plunk in his mitt with the bases loaded and two out.

Besides that, Gabby said he'd like to make a home run, he'd like to knock out the long fly that would win the seventh game, and he'd like to make 12 hits as Pepper Martin did in 24 times at bat last fall.

RIVAL BANDS, ORGANIZED cheering and other sidelights give college gridiron games color and appeal not to be found anywhere else, but close students of the sport like Arthur Sampson, of Boston, who follow the National Professional League, are convinced that for downright smart football the pros are in a class by themselves. Any defensive weakness is detected quickly. Any give-away on the part of the offensive players is noticed at once. Play has got to be just about perfect or the opposition will smear it for you in a hurry. Many college ends taught to smash, do that and nothing else most of the time. Numerous other ends taught to play a waiting game use that style almost continually. High-class pro ends mix tactics.

THE SAME IS true of the linemen. Occasionally you see a college lineman who can pitch under when a play comes his way and still fade out to the flanks on wide runs. Some of the Notre Dame linemen have advanced that far, but not many so skilled are found elsewhere outside the pro ranks.

In this connection, one pro game is recalled in which a burly guard first stopped a line buck directly at him on the line of scrimmage by submarining under the offensive charge and then intercepted a forward pass 25 yards from the line of scrimmage.

PROFESSIONAL PLAYERS DON'T rush madly on the field, and they don't waste any energy in plays not in their territory, but they run hard when carrying the ball, block ruggedly and tackle fiercely. Chris Cagle didn't play any more that day after being hit for the first time in his initial pro game.

J. E. Widener

It's only natural that the pros should be nearer to perfection than the collegians. The former are post-graduates. It is not until a player is near the end of his college career in his senior year that he is a finished workman. It's after he has become a perfect machine that he goes into the pro ranks.

---

REPORTS THAT PURSES may be slashed for the closing meetings of the season at the Empire City and Jamaica tracks, in view of a drop of more than 50 per cent in attendance at Aqueduct as compared with last fall, give only a faint idea of the plight of horseracing in the East. Joseph E. Widener, vice chairman of the Jockey Club and president of the Westchester Racing Association, operating Belmont Park, says the only thing that can save the turf sport in the Empire State is favorable action by the Legislature next winter on a bill to legalize totalizator betting, a form of the pari-mutuel. He predicts that otherwise there will be racing for only about three weeks in 1933 and that later all the tracks will be closed and abandoned.

60,000 CROWD MAY ATTEND BIG BOUT

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Mickey Walker scaled the amazing weight of 174½ pounds for his 15-round battle with Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, at Long Island City tonight, when they scaled at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Schmeling weighed 188½.

Editor's Note: The following article on the Walker-Schmeling fight gives the pre-battle impressions of Jack Lait, author of the "Big House" and other famous stories.

By JACK LAIT

Written Expressly For International News Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Schmeling by a technical knockout in about the thirteenth round. Max works slowly and gets better with each round. Mickey comes in like a bull, but he can't hurt Schmeling. Mickey is a bleeder. The German will cut him up until the referee will have to stop it.

I select the thirteenth because Schmeling will go after a knockout. He will start easy and depend on his ability to take it as long as he doesn't slug toe-to-toe with the swinging Walker. He will look poor and even scared for four or five rounds. He will begin beating Walker down blow for blow for several rounds thereafter. Jacobs will still keep him cautious.

SEES EASY VICTORY

About the eleventh, Max will get the sign to go out and finish his man. Walker will be too weak and worn by then to lift haymakers. Schmeling will chop and slip and cut with his wicked right and his fair left. He will now be the aggressor. When Walker is going and a good man is after him, he flounders and he gets it where he can't take it, in the face, especially over his eyes.

The more desperate Walker will get, the more scientifically Schmeling will slice him up. When it gets to about the thirteenth, there will be no time left to take chances and Jacobs will order his man to cut loose—like he did on Stribling and Risko, three rounds or so before the finale. He will punch Walker all around the ring and the third man will stop the bloody mess.

I have seen both Schmeling and Walker in practically every major fight they've lifted a glove in. The match is a natural on paper, but I can't give Walker a chance in the ring. Schmeling knows he has to get a knockout.

Decisions over Walker when he finishes on his feet are almost unknown. Max would knock him out in the seventh or eighth if it were a 10-rounder; he will do it in the twelfth or thirteenth of the 15-rounder.

METHODICAL BATTLE

If he doesn't chop Walker to a finish before the fourteenth, Mickey will call on that super-reserve that he saves for the last and next-to-last rounds, as he did with Greb. Greb was too much man for him, but Walker, who was hopeless and helpless until then, made a desperate spurt with what no one believed he

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: THE MIND-READING DOG—Capt. E. C. Lower, owner of Bozo, has been training dogs for more than 20 years, but Bozo is the only one that proved susceptible to thought transmissions from a human being. The dog can be seated alone on a stage, his master in the audience, yet react to human thought by barking the number of rings on ladies' fingers, the number of coins handed to his master, or any number from 1 to 10 of which one may be thinking. I was impressed with Bozo's uncanny ability after a recent demonstration in my office.

McCarthy and Koenig Stymies of Series

By NICK ALTROCK,
Baseball's Comedian

When the Cubs meet the Yankees the spy system should be like the irresistible peacherino running into the immovable traffic cop.

Nick Altrock

I would still like to be a fly speck on the clubhouse wall when Koenig starts to tell the Chicago flingers how to pitch to Ruth. So far as I've observed, with my spectacles on and off, Babe's only weakness is hot dogs and they can't pitch him any of those.

You see, on account of Joe McCarthy formerly managing the Cubs he is going to know all about them and on account of Mark Koenig once playing with the Yanks he can tell his mates the lowdown on Ruppert's outfit, too. Put them both together and it sounds like a 16-every day.

The Cubs have a swell hurling staff, but so did the Pirates in 1927. That year, the day before the series opened, the Yanks held batting practice on Forbes Field while the Pittsburghs were lolling around. Ruth started lamming the ball to Harrisburg, Johnstown and other mid-Pennsylvania towns, and, even when he knocked a foul, it landed in West Virginia.

SCARED OUR PIRATES

After Ruth got through using the centerfield stands for a tennis net, the other Yank sluggers had their turn with practically the same results. That night the Pirate pitchers took quinine pills for supper. They may not have had malaria, but they sure were shivering.

This year the Cubs' pitching staff is a lulu, but the Yanks' batting order has been going along at the rate of 10 kiloswats an hour. Just remember the Ruppers haven't been shut out this season. The Yanks' end of the scoreboard has no more use for zeroes than thermometers in Miami.

I am not claiming the Cubs are just a bunting team, either. That bird Cuyler can break up a ball game like a parcel post clerk handling a dozen eggs. And there are several other members of the Wrigley payroll that swing a nasty bludgeon.

AH! THE WISE MONEY

I see the betting favors the Yanks; but that doesn't mean a thing. A lot of the "wise money" that's down on the New York club today thought the worst of the depression was over in November, 1929. Personally, I'd rather trust my own hunch. And, if I didn't have a hunch between my shoulder blades, I'd even depend on a goitre before I would the so-called wise money. Because the only wise money today is inside a solvent bank.

When I pick a world series winner I make my bed and lie in it, even if it's only a park bench. This year I am staking my reputation on the Yankees. My reputation was 99 44-100ths asked and 67's bid at Saturday's market closing.

You've got to figure each winning player's share this year will be around $6,000 and the Yankees are money players. For $6,000, Babe Ruth would knock out a seven-bagger when the instructions were to bunt.

Of course, the Cubs have a pretty strong money yen, too. In fact, life in Chicago is valued so cheaply I'll bet any Cub would commit a triple murder for $6,000 cash, without an initial deposit.

JUDGE LANDIS NEXT

When it comes right down to that, for six grand I'd blow up Brooklyn Bridge myself. So it ought to be a great series.

P. T. A. RACQUET STARS WIN

By PAUL SULLIVAN

P. A. A. and Mount Lebanon recqueters swept singles verdicts in special exhibition net tilts with stars of the Belmont Tennis Club at Ingram yesterday afternoon.

Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace and top ranking player of the Steel City area, defeated Jim Patin, Ingram veteran, 6-3, 6-2, in feature fracas of the day.

In the number two tussle, Eddie Alcorn, Mount Lebanon stylist and Pitt court captain downed Bill Reynolds, youthful Belmont contender, 6-1, 6-0. Bob Baker, promising home combatant, dropped a warmly fought fray to Paul Sullivan, of the P. A. A., 6-3, 6-4, in the third seance.

BOWLING LEAGUE OPENS

The Hennessy Bowling League, with eight teams entered, will start the ball rolling tonight in the season's inaugural matches at St. John's Lyceum. The sponsor of the league is Police Inspector Dennis Hennessy, of the South Side.

Lardner, Baer, Altrock Three Funny Men

To grab every laugh out of the games, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph has engaged an incomparable trio of humorists who will split your sides with their funny observations on the series opening in New York Wednesday.

Read Altrock's pre-series articles today and tomorrow and set yourself for the real laugh explosions when the series gets under way.

BEARS ON EDGE FOR OPENING OF SERIES

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Chicago's Cubs bundled up their war materials today and headed eastward to battle the New York Yankees for world series glory and gold.

The Bruins left Chicago at high noon, and the club was moved by special train. Charley Grimm and his men will arrive in New York at 10 a. m. tomorrow, and planned to work out in the Yankee Stadium in the afternoon.

A final checkup showed every eligible ready for action. Mark Koenig, who will start at shortstop, played against Cincinnati yesterday, and although he dropped a throw on a possible double play, did some highly satisfactory batting. His contribution to the attack was three hits in as many times at bat.

Guy Bush demonstrated he is ready to go to the pitching mound in the championship series inaugural by pitching three hitless innings and fanning four batsmen. Gabby Hartnett caught most of the game and appeared fully recovered from the assortment of bruises that kept him out of part of the victorious National League drive.

As the club started away to defend the National League's possession of the world championship, tickets for the Chicago games of the series went into the mail today. The sale has not been as brisk as in 1929 when about $1,200,000 was returned to unsuccessful applicants, but it was still good enough to assure capacity crowds of around 51,000.

The construction of temporary bleachers over Sheffield and Waveland avenues, adjacent to Wrigley Field, was just about completed today, making possible an additional 10,000 seats which will go on sale the day of games at $1.10 each.

DUE HERE TONIGHT

WOMEN'S GOLF LEADERS TIED

SALEM COUNTRY CLUB, WEST PEABODY, Mass., Sept. 26.—Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Hayworth, N. J., and Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, tied at 77, even par, to set the pace in the National women's golf championship tournament qualifying round here today. Miss Van Wie scored 39 out and 38 in for her 77 about two hours after Miss Orcutt, medalist in this year's British women's championship, had posted 38-39—77.

The pair of 77's tied the championship medalist record. The last such performance was made in 1927 by Ada Mackenzie, former Canadian champion, and two years before that Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser established the record. Miss Orcutt, who has been pointing for this title play since her return from England, had to overcome a persistent slice to gain her perfect round.

HELEN HICKS FAILS

Miss Helen Hicks, of Long Island, defending champion, seemed destined to go out of the picture when she scored an 89 for the 18 holes. Too many 6's and one 7 dotted her card and she finished 12 over par. From indication, it appeared that at least an 87 would be needed to qualify.

Enid Wilson, British champion and one of the outstanding favorites, played beautifully up to the green and carded a 79, two strokes higher than the deadlocked leaders.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Haverford, Pa., who has held the national title three times and qualified in 15 of the past 35 title competitions, had a poor round, 87.

GLENNA STARTS WELL

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, the five-times champion, was even with par for the first four holes, getting a birdie 4 on the first one. Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., played with her and made a ragged start, going five over on the first four holes.

The qualifying scores:

STARS TO FACE CRAWFORDS

With three of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Larry French, Bill Swift and Earl Grace in the lineup, Casey Stengel is bringing his National League All-Stars to Greenlee Field for a seven-game series with the Pittsburgh Crawfords. The first game is scheduled for Wednesday night and will be played under the lights.

A number of prominent National League players are included in Casey's aggregation. Hack Wilson, Danny Taylor and Frederick, of Brooklyn, will be in the outfield, the infield will have Todd, of the Phillies on first; George Grantham, Cincinnati, on second; Durocher, of the Reds at short, and Fullis, of the Giants, at third.

Larry French and Swift, of the Pirates, and Hubbell and Parmelee, of New York, and Thurston, of Brooklyn, give Stengel a good pitching staff.

The second game will be played here Thursday night. The teams clash at Altoona on Friday, Saturday night at Greenlee Field, Sunday at the Municipal Stadium, Cleveland, and at Greenlee Field Monday and Tuesday of next week.

DODGERS WIN

STAPLETON, N. Y., Sept. 26. (AP.)—Held scoreless for three periods, Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers broke through in the last quarter to score a 7-to-0 victory over Stapleton in a National Professional Football League game here yesterday.

YANKEES WILL HAVE EDGE BEHIND BAT, RUTH SAYS

DICKEY RATED BETTER THAN HARTNETT

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

I already have compared the infields and outfields of the two teams which will clash in the world series, opening Wednesday, and in each instance it was my impression that there has been no particular edge for either team, in a defensive way, in either of these departments. Superior hitting gives the Yankees an edge. Now we come to the catching and again I rate the Yankees as having an edge because of better hitting.

Babe Ruth

I think that Bill Dickey is the best all-around performer among the major league catchers of 1932. It was for this reason that I named him recently in my All-America selections. But I would not imply that Hartnett is not a highly capable maskman and fully qualified to do everything a catcher is expected to do. He has been one of the leading catchers of recent years, and I know the Cubs are not going to suffer any from a catching standpoint. Still I rate Bill Dickey above the Cub veteran.

It happens that Dickey is enjoying his best year behind the bat, and in the poll of newspapermen, my fellow members of the All-America Board of Baseball, he drew the highest vote among the catchers. He has been steadily improving each year since he first joined the Yankees. Hartnett, on the other hand, has been having a poor season when compared to what he has done in the past. In other words, he has slipped back this year, while the Yankee catcher has come steadily forward.

GABBY NOT AT BEST

The latest batting averages of the National League show Hartnett with a mark of .265, whereas his lifetime batting mark in the majors up to this year was .295. Of course, Gabby always is dangerous when he goes to the plate, and it would be no surprise if he should outhit any particular player who might be named. But the fact remains that he has not been doing as well this year as he did in the past. There is a possibility that Rolly Hemsley will be used in some of the games. He is a player of great possibilities, and easily the fastest of the catchers eligible to take part in the series. A high percentage of his hits this year have been for extra bases—half of them in fact—but he has not batted as consistently as Hartnett, nor has he had the experience. So I look for the veteran to do most of the backstopping in these games.

The latest figures show Dickey batting .310, with 18 doubles, four triples and 15 home runs included in his 125 hits. Hartnett has batted at a .265 clip, and his extra-base hit collection includes 26 doubles, three triples and 10 home runs.

EACH LIKES OWN PARK

Each likes his own park, but neither will be at any marked disadvantage while playing in the other park. Hemsley has batted .212 and his 23 hits include eight doubles, three triples and three homers.

Art Jorgens, of the Yankees, and Zach Taylor, of the Cubs, also are eligible for the series, but I do not expect to see either of them called upon for much work, unless an injury forces one of the other catchers out of the games. Both are light hitters.

MAXIE CHOICE OF LAIT

Schmeling will take it out of him before he can go that far. From about the seventh on, he will methodically butcher Mickey and draw blood. Joe Dundee beat Walker that way. Several others came near it. Schmeling is not a natural body-punisher, but has learned how to go after the middle. He will start weakening the older boy down below the first half, then when the steam is out of the Walker wallops, he will switch and chisel at the vulnerable face.

The wish is not father to the thought. Mickey is an old pal. Schmeling is a foreigner and a stranger. Schmeling isn't the sort of fighter I like at all. Just the sort I bet on.

BIG GATE SEEN

Schmeling will enter the ring a 3-1 favorite to win. A crowd of some 60,000 is looked for, many of the patrons world series fans come on a few days ahead to kill two birds with one stone. The Madison Square Garden interests are looking for a $200,000 gate—a lot of money in these days.

Jack Sharkey, who won the heavyweight title from Schmeling in a recent battle in the same ring, will be at the ringside. The winner likely will get first crack at him when he decides to defend the crown.

Mrs. William Randolph Hurst's Milk Fund will benefit from the proceeds tonight.

Al Fay, of Pittsburgh, Walker's stablemate, meets Vincente Parille, of Chile, in one of the feature preliminaries. The main bout is expected to get under way between 9:30 and 10 o'clock. There will be no radio broadcast.

ROONEYS OPEN WITH WIN

By TOM BIRKS

The Western Pennsylvania Independent Football Conference opened its 1932 championship race yesterday afternoon with the defending champs, the Rooneys, and the newly admitted Bellaire Eagles recording decisive triumphs. The Rooneys beat the East Liberty Papales, 9-0, at Greenlee Field, and Bellaire won over West View, 12 to 7, at Bellaire.

The brand of ball put on display was conceded to be far superior to that offered last season, the play being harder and more sensational, with the many college stars in the lineups showing to advantage.

The third game of the Conference schedule, featuring the Dan Burns club, of New Kensington, and the Baehr Olympics, of McKeesport, will be played at New Kensington Wednesday night under the lights.

The Rooneys scored a field goal in the second period when Jimmy Rooney sent a placement kick between the uprights. The touchdown came in the final period with two minutes to play. Wop Politz lost one of Jimmy Rooney's punts in the sun, and Lewis recovered for the Big Green on the four-yard mark. Harp Vaughan threw a pass to Jimmy Rooney and he went over for the touchdown.

West View surprised Bellaire by scoring in the initial period when Albright recovered a Holmes fumble on the 26-yard line. Ross went over for the touchdown and also kicked the extra point.

Holmes started Bellaire to victory in the second quarter with a 32-yard run and he then threw a pass to Fromhart for the touchdown. Bellaire took the ball on downs on its own 38-yard line in the third quarter and marched to the two-yard mark, from which point Charley Edwards, former Pitt star, went over.

In other feature games yesterday, the Rox Rangers played a scoreless tie with the Tarentum Firemen; the McKeesport Olympics downed the Twenty-sixth Ward team, 46-0; the North Braddock Firemen won over the Trafford Indians, 2-0; the Twenty-seventh Ward Traders bowed to the Veronas, 13-0; Krieger-Marx played a scoreless tie with the Bloomfield Civics; the J. Scott Morgans downed New Idea, 26-0; Oakland Community lost to the Etna Sycamores, 13-0; Snee won, 7-0, over the North Side Merchants, and the Goslins defeated Beltzhoover, 6-0.

Schneider Wins In Sharon Race

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 26.—Huff Schneider, of Trafford, piloted his car to victory in the 50-mile auto race at the local speedway yesterday afternoon. Mike Feber, also of Trafford, was second and Larry Evans, of Steubenville, third.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Their long baseball campaign over, the Pirates today were free to do this or that of their own choosing. Manager George Gibson led a small squad of Buccaneers back to Pittsburgh this morning, the athletes traveling from St. Louis where yesterday they divided a doubleheader with the Cardinals that brought the schedule to a close.

Accompanying Gibson to Pittsburgh were Capt. Pie Traynor, Lloyd Waner, Larry French, Adam Comorosky, Gus Suhr, Tony Piet and Glenn Spencer. Others went to their homes situated at all points of the compass.

Soon after his arrival here, Manager Gibson went into a long conference with William E. Benswanger, president of the club. The meeting was of considerable significance to the club of next year. Benswanger will leave tonight for New York, where he expects to accomplish something other than the viewing to the world series games between the Yankees and Cubs.

PLAN ON DEALS

Prexy Benswanger and Pilot Gibson are eager to put through some deals with the idea of adding strength to a club which just missed winning the flag.

Neither Benswanger nor Gibson would divulge the identities of any of the players whom they are willing to swap. This is the obvious course to take as premature publicity might spoil the negotiations. But the Pittsburgh directors will strike while the iron is hot, as they feel there is no time like the present. Benswanger said:

"Gibby is not going to New York; George will leave for Texas in a day or two to visit with his daughter and her family for a month, but I will be able to get in touch with him in short order over long-distance telephone if anything big pops.

MAY DRAFT PLAYERS

"The annual draft meeting will be held tomorrow night at the Roosevelt Hotel, and while this may not bear any fruit from the Pittsburgh standpoint, we will play out our string. You know the clubs finishing lower than us in the standing will have the preference over us in the matter of players selected via the draft route. However it is possible that we will pick up somebody in this manner that will help."

The Buccos finished their exciting season well protected in second place and only three games below the pennant-winning Cubs.

HARD LUCK, BILL

Max Carey's Dodgers landed in the third notch of the standings, but Bill McKechnie was nosed out of the fourth money position, the Quakers winning fourth place by the margin of a single game.

Bill McKechnie was reported to be in line for a bonus provided the Braves finished among the first four.

The Giants and Cardinals finished in a deadlock for the sixth position, this development being one of the surprising things connected with the race. The Reds' claim on the cellar appears to be uncontested.

The Buccos won the first and lost the second game in St. Louis as the curtain fell. Bill Harris pitched the Rovers to a 7-1 victory in the early fight. Dizzy Dean dropped the Pirates in the finale, the score being 7-4.

VETERANS WIN

CHARLEROI, Pa., Sept. 26.—The Charleroi Veterans defeated the South Park Riders, 7 to 5, in the second game of the week-end polo series here yesterday. Saturday the Veterans won 7 to 5. Hack, riding No. 2 for the Veterans, scored six of his team's goals.

C. KAUFFMANN GOLF LEADER

Shooting a brilliant 64, two under par figures, Carl F. Kauffmann, five times winner of the city championship, held a one-stroke lead at the end of 18 holes of the 36-hole annual Schenley Park open golf tournament being played over the Schenley course today. The second 18 holes will be played this afternoon.

Kauffmann went out in 33 and returned in 31 to score his 64. Perry Del Vecchio, pro at Greensburg, was second at the halfway point with 65, while Vincent Eldred, of Highland, and Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, were deadlocked for third place with 66s. The cards of the leaders:

SOCCER TEAMS SHOW CLASS

Many interesting battles were flashed on the opening program of the Panhandle Soccer League yesterday. The Grove A. C. upset the dope by nosing out Sygan, 2 goals to 1, Gallatin defeated Shannon, 4 to 1, and the J. J. McGraths traveled to Steubenville to swamp the Buckeyes, 6-0. Cuddy downed Coverdale, 2 to 1.

The Washington County League also got under way yesterday, Avella flashing plenty of power to defeat Penowa, 8-0, while Cedar Grove and the Donohue elevens battled to a scoreless tie.

Mose Butch Meets Champion Tonight

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The ambition of every young boxer becomes the fulfilled dream of little Mose Butch, Oakland Italian southpaw bantamweight, tonight, when he sits in his corner at Motor Square Garden and looks across the ring at his opponent—a world champion.

Brown stands six feet tall, a freak of nature for a 118-pounder. Mose is just a little more than five feet tall and goes into the battle under a terrific handicap with regard to height and reach. However, he has two good fists, a punch, an unorthodox style, grit and experience, and is in fine trim and ready to make the most of his opportunity. Just a week ago, he saw Brown knock out Spider Pladner, the French champion, in one round in Toronto. There was little to buoy up Butch's spirits in that spectacle, but he enters tonight's fray undaunted.

POSTPONED MATCH

Butch and Brown first were matched for the Garden last winter, but, when Brown showed up on the eve of the battle, he was incapacitated by illness and the match had to be set back. The local man cannot win the championship under any conditions tonight, even by a knockout, for the articles call for him to enter the ring over the poundage for the class. However, he hopes to make such a strong showing that he will be able to force Brown into a championship match later.

STOCKS FALL UNDER LIGHT SELLING

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.) — An early bulge in stocks today failed to attract new buying orders, and the market dropped rather sharply, although trading remained sluggish.

The bull forces, which had hoped for a further advance in response to favorable incidents in the railroad field late last week, were plainly disappointed when gains of 1 to nearly 2 points in the carrier shares failed to hold, considerable profit-taking appeared.

The selling, while it did not reach large proportions, found few takers of stocks and extreme losses of 2 to 3 points developed in numerous utilities and industrials, notably among issues which last week had gained substantially, including Consolidated Gas, American Telephone, Du Pont, Air Reduction, U. S. Steel, Case, Harvester, Westinghouse and United Aircraft.

Wall street market commentators scanned anew the industrial prospect for the coming week. Considerable attention was turned to the possibility of a further increase in electric power production figures. Last week, the gain was disappointingly small, due to the fact that a premature increase in consumption occurred this year in the Labor Day week rather than the following week. Some quarters felt that the next weekly figures in relation to 1931 volume should show a fairly sizeable gain, representing in part a swing back to more normal bases for comparison with preceding years.

Interest also centered in the report of plans to sell 15,000,000 bushels of American wheat to China, particularly because of the effect that such a procedure might have on grain prices. The rise of commodity prices has lately flattened out, current indices showing a moderate recession. In order for security prices to go ahead, it was reasoned that new impetus must be given to the movement, preferably by concrete evidence of further broadening of business activity and by renewed buying of commodities.

WHEAT REACTS AFTER RISE

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Grain prices averaged higher early today, influenced by upturns in securities. Reports of unfavorable prospects for the new domestic winter wheat crop were also a bullish factor. Opening ¼-⅝ higher, wheat afterward reacted. Corn started ⅛-⅜ up and subsequently tended to sag.

Setbacks in wheat values following early advances carried the market down soon to about 1½ cents under Saturday's finish. Signs of another increase of the United States wheat visible supply against a decrease last year counted as a drag on prices. Meanwhile, there was dearth of sustained buying power, and rather persistent selling orders which came from the northwest were not readily absorbed. Corn and oats weakened as a result of big receipts of corn here. Provisions eased with cereals.

BOND MARKET MOVEMENTS ERRATIC

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—In the face of some wide speculative fluctuations and diverse news currents, the bond market more than held its own during the past week.

While the best quality loans of all categories generally maintained a steady position, low-priced specialties jumped about nervously with gains or losses of 1 to 3 or more points.

Some of the speculative railroad bonds had a relapse when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation failed to act on the application for a sizeable loan by the Baltimore and Ohio to meet a maturity next week. Also the Nickel Plate's efforts to obtain the approval of security holders for the refunding of a note issue due next Saturday were not meeting with the hoped-for success.

RAILS DROP AND RALLY

Bonds of both the Baltimore and Ohio and Nickel Plate companies slumped sharply, but recovered. Heavy trading took place in issues of Allegheny Corporation, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Rock Island, St. Paul, Chicago and Northwestern, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Southern, Southern Pacific and Erie.

International telephone loans were under pressure at one time, but they, too, rallied moderately. Bonds of the rubber, oil and amusement companies moved over a wide range.

U. S. ISSUES HIGHER

The United States government department was firm throughout, some of the liberties and high-interest treasuries moving up fractionally to new top prices for the year.

Foreign obligations, for the most part, advanced. The Argentine list, especially recorded substantial gains, while the Australians, Colombians, French, Germans, Norwegians and Belgians were in demand at better prices. The Canadians were generally steady. It was reported the Canadian government contemplated the issuance of a $50,000,000 internal loan soon.

Cotton Consumption Increase Estimated

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The New York Cotton Exchange service estimates world consumption of American cotton in August at 1,028,000 bales against 916,000 in July and 940,000 in August a year ago. The increase was entirely due to the stepping up of consumption in the United States from 270,000 bales in July to 393,000 in August. Abroad the consumption declined from 646,000 bales in July to 635,000 bales in August.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Though under no heavy pressure, Curb stocks lost considerable ground today. Trading was slow, and the losses sustained by most of the leaders appeared to be due to lack of buying interest rather than volume of selling.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in: 100 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list:

School Elevens Face Tough Competition

By JULIUS LEVIN

Favorites in the races for the scholastic football championships of Western Pennsylvania, including those entered in the Class AA, Class A and Class B groups, apparently are going to find the competition unusually tough, judging from the results of early-season contests.

Although the season is just two weeks old the underdogs have shown enough class against their stronger opponents to strengthen the contention that there are a number of surprises in store for the topnotchers in the three championship races.

Followers of the scholastic sport are in for some real excitement this week-end when the members of the Class AA High School Football Conference pry off the lid. This group includes what is considered the cream of high school football teams, its membership numbering 12 teams that in the past always have played prominent parts in the championship races.

WASHINGTON WEAK

One of the outstanding upheavals of the early scholastic games has been the failure of Washington High to get off to a winning start. The Little Presidents, playing their first season under the guidance of Bill Cox, former McDonald High coach, who succeeded Hank Day, now at Wash-Jeff, have engaged in two contests and both resulted in deadlocks. Two weeks ago the Blue and Black machine played a 7-7 draw with Waynesburg and last Saturday a scoreless deadlock with Aliquippa.

The failure of the Little Presidents to live up to the form of previous years only serves to bear out the contention of scholastic fans that when Hank Day pulled stakes at Washington High he left nothing but a brilliant 15-year record and tradition for his successor.

Hank always had the Little Presidents in the running for the W. P. I. A. L. title and naturally Washington supporters looked for Bill Cox to do likewise. However, Cox finds conditions at Washington considerably changed. To begin with, Cox took over the present squad with only one veteran, Calvin Maize, a tackle, around whom to build a team. And to add to his troubles he found most of his new players inexperienced. In fact, the opening battle with Waynesburg found six boys in the Washington lineup who never played football.

MEET TOPNOTCHERS

Facing a schedule that calls for Washington to engage five Class AA opponents and with a team that has a line averaging only 154 pounds and a backfield averaging 145 pounds, Coach Cox finds himself in a tough spot trying to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor.

Accustomed to having a championship contender over a span of years, it will be interesting to note how Washington fans react this season, which, from all appearances is likely to be the worst ever turned in by a Blue and Black eleven.

A number of upsets were recorded among the scholastic teams in last week's games. The biggest surprise of the Friday duels was the defeat of South Hills, defending City League champion, at the hands of South in an intersectional contest. However, the Tunnelites experienced the same trouble last season when they lost their opener to Peabody and then turned right around and won the city championship. Monessen received a surprise from Duquesne in the form of a scoreless deadlock.

ETNA HIGH SURPRISES

Saturday's games were filled with unexpected results. Westinghouse High was impressive in holding the Wilkinsburg eleven, a member of the Class AA group, to a 7-0 score. Etna, however, turned in the biggest upset of the day when this Class B team scored a 19-0 victory over Tarentum, a Class A contender. Donora, Jimmy Russell's contender for the Monongahela Valley title and considered one of the strongest teams in the W. P. I. A. L., scored a 33-12 victory over Trinity, of Washington.

Central Catholic High, a comparative newcomer in scholastic football, gave the Clairton eleven, last year's Class A champion, a busy afternoon in its opener, holding the Woodman charges to a 14-0 score. Midland, undefeated last year, found Ellwood City a real opponent, the Lomond eleven barely winning a 6-0 decision from the Benedict machine.

All of the Double A members, with the exception of Monessen and Washington, came through their games with victories.

PITT, DUKES STRONG

By JESS CARVER

The college football situation is well in hand. Greasy Neale still is chewing nails down in Morgantown and Crafty Cam Henderson, the well-known Elkins citizen, has a neat speech prepared for his D. and E. varsity, to be delivered this afternoon. Mister Neale has a series of talks in mind for the Mountaineers, which will be fed 'em daily until Saturday, when they clash with the Pitt Panthers in their own Stadium.

Unless you insist on still regarding the Duquesne-West Virginia result as an upset, you'll go along with this correspondent in agreeing that the first big week-end of the 1932 football campaign went over rather quietly. Not meaning to gloat, but this department both foresaw and foretold a Duquesne win over the West Virginians. It also picked Pitt to beat Ohio Northern, which did not bring about anything in the way of a headache.

DUKES HAVE CLASS

Just this about the Dukes. Don't take 'em too lightly. They are not going to win all their games this fall. They won't beat Pitt and probably will be beaten by Wash-Jeff, but they are deserving of high rating. The line Joe Bach has turned out is the best Duquesne ever boasted and will get better as the season goes on. If the attack can be strengthened, you'll have to admit it wasn't so hot against the Mountaineers, the Red and Blue will be a first rate contender and a good short-end bet against most any opponent.

Pitt's Panthers hardly worked up a good sweat in trouncing little Ohio Northern Saturday, the contest being such a setup that it was impossible to get much of a line on the eleven. Dr. Sutherland has developed for the most grueling campaign ahead. The line looked pretty good, though, with the two new tackles, Bob Hoel and Paul Cuba, exhibiting real class, especially on the offense. They didn't have much to do when Ohio Northern had the ball, because the Pitt ends played such fine games.

GENEVA DEFEATS D. AND E.

Thiel, Grove City, Westminster, Waynesburg and Geneva came through their contests last week hunky-dory. Geneva gave Davis-Elkins a swell send-off for the season by taking 'em Friday night, 21 to 6. Westminster, apparently fully recovered from the Duquesne defeat, beat Slippery Rock by the same score it was beaten by here. Grove City had to step on the gas to win over Glenville and Thiel hung up three touchdowns against Morris Harvey. Grove City, lacking reserve strength, and lacking it sadly, too . . . must take on the Dukes here Friday night.

The big game of the week brings Pitt and West Virginia together. Unless the Mountaineers improve their all-round play at least 50 per cent over that they exhibited against the Dukes, the Panther second team will beat 'em. Neale has ball players big enough to go bear hunting with switches, but so far, the Mountaineer play has not been co-ordinated.

Carnegie Tech has nothing soft ahead in Geneva. A good passing club, such as the Covenanters, always is poison as a first-game opponent, and when a passing team has a quarterback of the caliber of Art Grahame, it is doubly dangerous. If the Techs escape without being scored upon, they'll be lucky.

This Grahame will be no cracker to the Tartans. He's hardtack and will take a lot of soaking before he softens up.

OWSTON QUITS TEMPLE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—The Temple football eleven had lost another star today, the second this season because of financial conditions. The latest student to withdraw was Bob Owston, 190-pound sophomore fullback from Pittsburgh. Ted Smyth, the best blocking back on the squad, dropped out of school last week for the same reason.

GIANTS DEFEATED

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Keeping the battle in enemy territory throughout the game, the Portsmouth Spartans pushed over a touchdown in the second quarter to defeat the New York Giants, 7 to 0, in the season's first National League encounter for both teams here yesterday.

PLAA WINS TITLE

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Martin Plaa won the singles championship of the professional tennis tournament here yesterday by defeating Albert Burke, 6-1, 6-2, 1-6, 3-6, 6-4. Big Bill Tilden clinched second place by defeating Hans Nussiem, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

VALENTINE

Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Inferior Housework Causes Friendly Neighbor to Reprimand Val

CHAPTER XXXI.

All the 21 years of her life Val had looked forward to this, to being married, and having a home of her own. And now she had it.

Well, if this is all there is to it then a girl might as well stay single, she thought, trying not to be too disappointed and finding it almost impossible to keep it from Joe.

Dear Joe . . . Joe was a dear. She did love Joe, with all her heart. When he was home and they were together and there was no one to come visiting, and no place they had to go to visit she was happy. Truly happy.

But how seldom that was. Joe had been so quiet when she knew him at home. He had few friends, never went anywhere. Always home with his drawing board and his pencil, or going for a walk, or sitting out on the porch on a warm summer evening with her.

Now everything was so different.

Everybody knew Joe here. He was young Joel Carey, the architect, nephew of the Hon. Joel Joshua Bolton. Not just one of the Careys who lived on Cornish street. Everybody wanted Joe and his new wife to dinner, everybody wanted to come to Joe's new apartment to call.

UNINTERESTING PEOPLE

She didn't dislike any of the girls as much as Pearl, but she didn't like any of them very much either. And the men! Well, they might be bright—from Joe's point of view—but they certainly weren't interesting. Nor considerate. Always talking about people and things she knew nothing about, and then if she DID say some little thing about how much nicer the flowers and fruit and things were in California they looked at her just as though she had said something insulting. That showed how narrow-minded they were, and how provincial!

"Well, I've tried to like them," she told herself, "I've tried and tried. And I'm not just being mean and nasty, because there are a great many things about Minneapolis and Minnesota that I do like."

To make a point of that, she wrote long, descriptive letters home to Aunt Julia, and Aunt Julia, driven by loneliness and the need to talk to someone about Val, used to buttonhole the Clarksons whenever either of them showed themselves in their garden.

"Yoo hoo! How are you? I just got a letter from Val!"

"It's gettin' so I hate to go out and water the flowers," Mr. Clarkson complained.

"Don't talk! You're only here nights. If you had to live next door to her all day and listen to her! There she sits, right back of the lace curtains, and soon as I set foot out the door there she is with the window open, yoo-hooing at me.

UNWELCOME NEWS

"I get so sick of hearing about how many lakes there are in the city of Minneapolis, and the lemon yellow autumn leaves and the red-orange autumn leaves, and the scarlet autumn leaves I could just scream. Seems to me that Val is awful taken up with scenery for a bride!"

"You didn't have no time for scenery when we was first married, did you, Emma?"

Emma Clarkson's dark eyes flashed, the rich color coursed under the swarthy skin. For a moment she was a girl again. She laughed, her snuffling, boisterous laugh that Val had always hated.

And then she sobered and said, "Wouldn't surprise me if it didn't last. Mrs. Carey's hopin' it won't.

Val spent hours writing home to Aunt Julia. Hours writing and tearing up answers to Marjorie's letter. She had intended to get her answer in the mail right away, but it was nearly two weeks before she finished the masterpiece.

It began with polite admiration for Marjorie's apartment, which must be just DARLING—heavily underscored. Then a detailed, and it must be confessed, somewhat idealized description of her own apartment. A little restrained ecstasy about her happiness with Joe. Then toward the end:

"I am sorry to hear that about Lester Sherwood. It makes a girl feel very sad to think a man is drinking, on account of her marrying another. If you see him again, ask him for my sake, to forget. Tell him all is over between us, and my only hope is that he will marry and be as happy as I am with my beloved Joe.

"Joe and I send our best to you and Frank. Lovingly,

"Valentine Macfarlane Carey."

The signature was still new enough to afford her pleasure. She practiced until she could sign it with a flourish. She examined it, now with pleased interest.

Perhaps she had not said quite enough about Lester. It was all right to be restrained, but Marjorie might not understand. It might be a little better to make things a little clearer.

So she added:

"I'd love to hear from Lester some time. Tell him to write and give us all the latest news and gossip."

After it was finally sealed and stamped and put in the mail box she wished she had it back, but it was too late to do anything about, and she tried not to worry.

TIME FLIES

Three weeks later Marjorie wrote again. She wrote seven pages, all about herself and Frank.

Not a word about Lester.

Val had not had a word from Millie since the wedding. That worried her, too. Did Millie think so little of her? Or had something happened to prevent her writing? It worried her. . . .

Not that there was ever time enough to really worry, or think things out. The days dragged, and yet they flew.

She'd get up in the morning thinking, "I'll get everything out of my big trunk today, and have the janitor take it down to the basement . . . and I'll make up the theatrical gauze curtains—I can't stand those awful striped rayons a day longer . . . And then I'll make a couple of calls in the afternoon . . . oh, botheration, why do people call? And start dinner early, and try one of those noodle rings Mrs. Peacock makes, and ——"

But by the time she had made up the big brass bed, with as few wrinkles as possible, and washed the breakfast dishes, it was too near lunch time to start any serious work. And after lunch she couldn't put down the magazine or book she had been reading while she ate her solitary lunch.

With a box of chocolates beside her and a pitcher of water handy, so that she wouldn't have to run out to the kitchen for a drink when the sweetness of the chocolates cloyed, she'd curl up in the most comfortable chair and read and dream, and read and dream and wish she were back in California—with Joe, of course. And the first thing she'd know there would be Joe's key in the latch and nothing in the house for dinner!

Mrs. Peacock scolded her.

"Val, I don't know as it's any of my business, but it's true the less you do the less you want to do. And the more you do the happier you are. When I had a houseful of boarders, doing all my own work, and takin' care of the boys—all my own washing and baking, too, mind you—I was the happiest woman in the world—"

Val looked uncomfortable, tried to change the subject. Mrs. Peacock came right out with it:

"Val, you don't give Joe the right kind of food. He's looking bad—"

"Why, I hadn't noticed. Do you think he does?"

"Of course, he does. He says it's because he's worrying about things back home, but it's more than that. When a man's stomach—"

"What things?" Val asked sharply.

Mrs. Peacock's comfortable pink face turned a slow, painful red.

"Now there I go, putting my big foot in it! Aurelia Peacock, if you aren't the CLUMSIEST—"

"Tell me!"

"No, you'll have to ask him yourself. If he didn't tell you, it isn't up to me. I'm sorry I said that. I thought, of course, you knew—"

Val stood up. Walked over to the imitation fireplace. Pretended to adjust the gas log flame.

Synopsis

Valentine Macfarlane is practically deserted at the age of 8 by her gay, widowed mother, Millie. She is brought up by a manhating maiden aunt, Julia, and becomes a stenographer. After a brief infatuation for the dashing Lester Sherwood, she marries a neighbor boy, Joe Carey, and goes to Minneapolis, where Joe is an architect. Val knows little about housekeeping or cooking. To return favors of a neighbor woman, Mrs. Peacock, Val and Joe plan a dinner. They also invite Pearl Neely, a friend of Joe's. Pearl begins to take liberties about the apartment. Val disapproves, but says nothing.

Now Go On

"You don't give Joe the right kind of food," said Mrs. Peacock.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Hugh's Discovery Leads to Outburst of Jealousy

I was glad that Hugh had added his comment upon my "great kindness" to his expressed wish to be of service to me. It gave me an opportunity to expostulate, and to chatter perfunctorily. For every time I had seen Hugh alone since his return from the long silence that had surrounded him, I had had the uneasy feeling that he was holding himself in leash, and that at any moment he might throw aside the repression that he had imposed upon himself for years, and utter words which he should not speak, and to which I certainly should not listen.

"Suppose we relegate my 'great kindness' to the ash heap," I said. "This is my father's house, you know, and his the hospitality of which he would be the first to say you are making far too much.

"But I do want a service of you and of Lee Chow, too, if he is able. I am giving a dinner-dance next Friday night for Mrs. Arlen and her daughter—you do not know them, but they are friends of Mr. Veritzen—and I very much want you to be one of my guests."

"Philip Veritzen?" he queried with sudden intensity, and I saw that while he had heard my invitation, my utterance of this one name had swept everything else out of his mind. "Do you mean that he is—here? Are you still—working with him?"

CONSUMED WITH JEALOUSY

There was something in his voice that brought back a vivid memory to me—a memory of the only time Hugh Grantland had broken through the barrier of his self-restraint that he had erected between us. Goaded once beyond endurance by Philip Veritzen's purposely impressive possessive air toward me, Hugh, the first time afterward that he saw me alone, had told me of his long suppressed and hopeless love for me, and had finished with the impassioned cry: "If you ever leave your husband, you are coming to me and not to any other man."

"No, I'm not working with him. That is, I'm not in his employ as I was when you were here before," I stammered, "but—haven't they told you?"

"No one has told me anything," he said quickly, almost fiercely. "What is it—about you and him?"

"Nothing of much importance," I said, "except that I have written a play which he has accepted, and which is going to be produced in a short time."

"A play of yours—that man is going to produce it? And your husband is permitting it?"

I got it at last, and something of the reverential affection I had given to Hugh Grantland flew away, forever. He was consumed with jealousy as mad as Dicky's ever had been, and he had added to it a crass thought that never could have been Dicky's. He evidently did not credit me with ability to write a play clever enough to suit the critical taste of Philip Veritzen, and thought the great producer was adopting my brain child because he was so attracted to me, and would put it into shape himself.

HUGH APOLOGIZES

All my love is my husband's, but I have known for a long time that if I never had met Dicky it would have been very easy for me to have loved Hugh Grantland. I had known that if I had married him, he never would have "looked at another woman," although I had guessed that his jealousy would have been as great as Dicky's.

But I had not known until this minute that he secretly cherished as archaic ideas concerning woman's work and mental ability as had Robert Savarin when he was betrothed to Lillian. If I had married him, there never would have been any opportunity for me to realize my long suppressed ambition to write plays, which Dicky was so loyally and admiringly furthering.

I think he saw by my face that he had gone too far, for he recovered himself hastily and spoke with dignified apology.

"Please forgive me for that speech," he said. "I really was not responsible when I uttered it. And accept my congratulations. Philip Veritzen's accolade is indeed something of which to be proud.

"Did I understand you to say your dinner-dance was to be given for friends of his? Friday? I shall be very glad to attend. Tell me all about it. Perhaps I can help you in some way."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

An affair very much resembling an art exhibit took place at 11 a. m. Saturday in front of the Enright Theater in East Liberty.

It was the occasion of the regular Saturday meeting for the members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club and all spent the past week searching for photographs of George Arliss. The winners in the photograph contest were Bill Eiseman and Dominic Liberto and between them they had gathered well over 100 photos of the popular movie actor.

When everyone had exhibited their collection of photographs and been duly rewarded for their efforts the meeting came to order and Bill Eiseman, the Grand Jester, took charge of the program.

First in the list of pre-arranged events was a sack race for the boys. All boys present gathered upon the spacious stage, placed their feet in a large gunny sack, toed the starting line and anxiously awaited the signal that would start them on a history making speed test. After many falls and lost sacks Dominic Liberto again took the prize, his second of the day.

The boys then vacated the stage so that the girls might have their customary dancing lesson under the tutelage of Miss Ruthie Miller. The Enright girls derive real enjoyment from their dancing lessons and never tarry a moment when called upon the stage. It is one grand rush to get there first and every pupil trys hard to win favor with the teacher by close application to the lesson. Saturday's session was complete in every detail of class dancing and carried the girls through every step and limbering exercise.

Undaunted by the girls having usurped the entire stage, the boys retired to the scene of the Enright marble shooting tournament to engage in the last lap of the contest to decide the champion marble shooter of the club. The last session was filled with excitement to the overflowing point, but slightly less colorful than the previous laps of the contest. Albert Hutfles, the runner-up in points scored, had comfortable sailing with his big lead and emerged the victor. For his ability Albert received a large selection of varicolored glass marbles and the championship crown from the hands of charming, little Angelina Mastrilli, patroness of the tournament.

Albert and Angelina posed while a staff photographer took their picture upon the scene of battle amidst the throng of contestants and on-lookers.

To complete the day both the boys and girls participated in one more event. The boys engaged in an odd race across the stage, the object being to keep both feet on a piece of paper and by jumping and moving the paper along with them traverse the distance across the stage. A truly exciting affair, this race. Side-lines screaming and paper flying. By the time they had all finished it was a difficult task to discern the winner, the air filled with flying shreds of paper and hardly anyone finished with a whole piece of paper. Fred Bettilyon finished first and had nearly all of his paper with him and so received the award for the event.

The girls then participated in a sack-race with the boys standing on the side-lines to cheer them on to greater speed. The race was full of spills and many thrills and the winner was rewarded with a complete set of porcelain dolls.

And thus ends the story of another Enright Chapter meeting, a fun-filled hour that occurs once each week and it is an event that should not be missed.

Mayor Combs:—Just a word about the fact that Carthage sent her fire truck to help us, while some time ago, we charged ten dollars for putting out the fire in Carthage. On its face, that looks like we were very small and Carthage was generous. Let me say that Carthage did treat us very generously. True, Lamar trades a lot at Carthage, while Cathage trades none here this might naturally make Carthage feel she could afford to be nice to us—and she certainly was. When our truck is called to the country, here around Lamar, we charge nothing. It is in the country, where the folks trade with us.

Arousing Civic Interest

The Pennsylvania Railroad's Appeal to Its Employes Is Commendable.

It is no new thing in the Pittsburgh district for a corporation to tell its employes to vote. Generally, however, the adjuration has been to vote for specific candidates—candidates from whose election the corporation might hope to gain some valuable favor. There has hardly been a spirited campaign in years in which such tactics were not resorted to by commercial concerns allied with the political organizations which represented Special Privilege. The Pennsylvania Railroad itself has not been free from the charge of thus attempting to influence its employes.

Far different, however, is the appeal now being made by the Pennsylvania to its employes in the Central Region. They are being asked to take an active part in civic affairs, to interest themselves in the problems of government, and that means they are being urged to vote; but there is no suggestion as to how they shall vote, no suggestion that they surrender their own judgment and let the railroad company decide for them how their ballots shall be marked. And so, of course, the company's appeal is praiseworthy.

Under the old dispensation publicity was the last thing a corporation desired when it set out to coerce its employes to vote a certain way. In what gratifying contrast is the Pennsylvania's frank announcement of what it is doing!

J. F. Deasey, vice president in charge of this region, simply reports that the employes will find in their pay envelopes the last of the month a circular calling attention to the burdensome rise in taxes, and suggesting that a reduction in governmental expenditures can be brought about by an aroused public opinion.

The voters are showing deplorable apathy, as evidenced by the sharp slump in registration. Every effort to arouse them to study public problems and perform their civic duty is to be welcomed.

Well Done, Pirates!

The Fine Showing of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club Is a Pleasant Surprise.

The National League pennant race is ended, with the Pittsburgh Pirates in second place. At the beginning of the season some of the sports writers predicted they would land in fifth place, and most of the experts agreed they would be lucky to finish in the first division. Their fine showing is a pleasant surprise.

They made only a fair start, then forged ahead, and at one time were six games ahead of their nearest competitor. Disaster overtook them on the next to the last eastern trip, but their fighting spirit never waned, and they rallied to second place. Bravo, Pirates!

Congratulations are due not only the players but also to George Gibson, the manager, who returned to pilot the team after a long absence from baseball, and also to William E. Benswanger, whose first year it was as president of the club in succession to the late Barney Dreyfuss.

The rare business ability shown by Mr. Benswanger contributed to the Pirates' success. He gained the good will of the community and drew to Forbes Field crowds of spectators whose support of the Pirates no doubt had something to do with maintaining their morale when the "breaks" of the game went against them.

The New City Organist

Pittsburgh Is Promised a Treat in Marshall Bidwell's Recitals at Carnegie Institute.

Marshall Bidwell, of Coe College, Iowa, who was chosen, in competition with 16 other prominent organists, as organist at Carnegie Institute, in succession to Dr. Charles Heinroth, begins his work in Pittsburgh this week. His first recitals will be given next Saturday and Sunday.

It is evident from the encomiums heaped upon Mr. Bidwell by the nation's foremost authorities on organ music, and published in the current number of the Carnegie Magazine, that the people of Pittsburgh are to have a treat in his concerts.

It takes more than skillful playing to make a concert enjoyable. The program must appeal. Mr. Bidwell has some ideas on this subject which show good sense and sympathy with the public. He says:

"One point never to be lost sight of is that there must not be a single dull moment, either from the standpoint of the musical material or the manner of its performance. An organist who is unable sympathetically to put himself in the place of his audience cannot possibly be successful in this very specialized branch of the profession. For if an audience is restless or bored, it is either the fault of the program or its rendition. The organist must have a keen insight into every mood, and accordingly he must in turn stimulate, calm, soothe and uplift his hearers. Every legitimate device should be used, including the emotional and the humorous, and it is vital that at least half the program contain familiar selections which are favorites to people in general."

With a brilliant organist, entertaining such views, Pittsburgh is assured of a rich store of noble, uplifting entertainment.

Preparing the Budget

It Is Especially Important That Council Be Assisted With Good Advice This Year.

All departments of the city government are to submit their requests for appropriations for 1933 to Mayor Charles H. Kline not later than tomorrow. The finance committee of Council will start work on the budget in about a month.

In the meanwhile plans for raising revenue are to be considered, and it is expected a public hearing will be held within the next 10 days on proposals to impose special new taxes to relieve the burden on real estate.

It is extraordinarily important that Council shall be assisted with good advice in the preparation of the new imposts and the granting of the departmental appropriations.

Notwithstanding salary cuts, the discharge of numerous employes, and sharp curtailment of municipal activities, the city has a huge deficit. Tax receipts have fallen far below expectations.

To balance the budget without crushing the taxpayers or seriously crippling the administration of the city will be a difficult task. Council needs the help of the city's best minds.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Lemons in Love's Garden

Why do women like bad boys? Why do they fall for playboys, weaklings and Lotharios? How did they get that taste for masculine "lemons in the Garden of Love?"

* * *

"If a girl ever cared for Peck's Bad Boy," writes Helen B——, "could it spoil her taste for the nice humdrum kind?"

* * *

As Helen-to-Helen, I'll SAY it could—and does! There's something about these spoiled darlings—these selfish, headstrong, devil-may-care irrepressibles and irresponsibles. Call it magnetism, personality, audacity, charm or what-have-you—but it's SOMETHING that makes everybody and everything else seem flat, colorless and tame, for a little while.

The woman who has loved or married one of these fascinating love-racketeers, may get over it or divorce him. She may love and marry again. But no other man ever goes to her head or makes her see stars, like that. The glamour is off, for HER!

* * *

And a woman who has been taken for a "run-around" by a dashing philanderer, may "come to." But deep down, somewhere, there is always the poignant memory of his kisses and a sigh for the old heartaches. At least they were exciting. Never a dull moment!

What is the charm of a sinner? Is it BECAUSE he is a sinner? Nonsense! It is probably just that charm of his, which has MADE him a wildrake or a skallywag or a weakling. Women have spoiled him all his life. He probably vamped his nurse and his school-teacher. And got everything he wanted, from the lollipops to forgiveness. Women are fools that way!

* * *

That sort of man, always appeals to the mother-instinct in every woman. He is filled with an eternal boyishness that pulls at her maternal heart-strings. Every woman feels that he needs to be "taken care of"—and that she was especially ordained by Heaven to "save him."

* * *

"Save him," if you can—but don't MARRY him! Because you may save him from jail—but you'll never save him for YOURSELF. Nor from other women. At 18, he was like that. And, at 80, with one foot in the grave, he will still be hobbling around the corner, after a skirt.

EUROPE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

HAVRE, Sept. 26.—That chalky bourne, Havre, as usual, was in the choking clutch of a pea-soup fog and a bone-chilling mistral. No stretch of anywhere is, to the eye, so devastatingly depressing, continually curtained as it is with successive scrims of rain, mist, fog. I always want to loosen up my clothes for a good cry.

Due to weather density, disembarking was delayed six hours. Nothing is quite so tiresome as an ocean liner after you have had your ride. You wonder how you ever loved it—the smelly old thing. But the boat train for Paris is one of the jolliest of continental capers.

The dinky train with its Gay '90 smokestack, peanut whistle! And, best of all, the flushed excitement of the Frenchy who starts it by waddling up and down the side of the coaches frantically ringing a huge dinner bell. A lurch, a gulp and voila! Normandy flashes by, in rolling panorama.

When I started bringing Billy to France his fare on the boat train was 8 francs. Each year there has been an increase, until it now is 24 francs. I bucked in righteous wrath, blessing out the chemin-de-fer d'etat and tossing in a couple of dirty digs about conductors' sticky fingers.

After a wrangle, he tried to compromise by returning two francs. I spurned it haughtily. It seemed an insult to my petty cash account. Then we ordered ham sandwiches all around—including the conductor. With a grasshopper and a few red ants it would have been a second-hand picnic.

* * *

In our compartment for eight were Sam Hellman and Mrs. Reginald Wright Kauffman. An inquisitive fellow-passenger, with a dialect and a beam of good-will-to-man, catechized us about our several callings. Explaining we were writers, he admitted he did a little of it himself. Hellman wanted to know the nature of his writing. "I rite horses," he said. And the boat train skimmed on.

* * *

Out a train window, the crazy patches of French vegetable gardens quilt their geometrical dazzle. Each tiny plot with its blue-bloused peasant and sun-bonneted wife in sabots. Not an inch of land goes to waste. Now and then a shining vilayet and its inevitable auberge proclaiming, "Vins et Liquers." Chunky, dappled and belled Normandy horses with plaited, beribboned manes and collars pebbly with brass bosses, strain at high two-wheeled tumbrils. A priest, with a pancake hat and flying skirts, pedals by on a safety. Petits bourgeois with dark wine bottles strapped to handle bars. Black-frocked children with outstretched hands trotting along the train side shrilling: "Pin-neez, pin-neez!" The age-old cameo. Always the same and somehow always sentimentally quickening.

* * *

That coiling, thin silver ribbon, the Seine, is like Market street in San Francisco. No matter where you wander, you run into it. And, as in Napoleon's day, there still is the same living statue of frozen emotionalism and unbelievable patience—the Seine fisherman. For countless hours he stands—never sits—immobile with pole and line, his catch-basket hanging binocular fashion around his neck. I am told there are no fish, only minnows, and the Seine fisherman really is not fishing. It's his way of getting away from everything and day-dreaming. No one will disturb a silent fisherman. Incidentally, if you ever saw the Little Maumee in Ohio, you had a close-up of the Seine. And pronounce it "Senn," suckers.

* * *

Beyond Rouen, just half way to Paris, the train lurched to a dead stop in one of those fleeting but slashing showers. Out of a farm house ran a sprite of a girl, with Hope Hampton hair—en passant, one wonders what would happen to Hope Hampton in a shower—and the grace of a gazelle. She runs to the front of the train, kisses a mustached fellow in denims. Her dad's the engineer. Such naivete is France's greatest charm. And—but, porters swarm through the train windows. Gare St. Lazarre—everybody scram!

LISTEN, WORLD -:- -:-

By Elsie Robinson

The loneliness—that's the hardest part of it; the feeling that you're going through an experience no one else can share, or even understand.

Thousands of people all around you. Some of them very near and dear to you. And yet you know, you'd swear, that none of them have ever felt as you are feeling.

This fear that dogs you all the time. This feeling of being through with everything. This secret hunger you can't define. This sense that life is turning out all wrong—

No one else, you're positive, has ever felt like this before. If only someone had—if you could be sure that someone else had faced and, perhaps, conquered such inner desolation—it wouldn't be so hard to stand.

But it is so plain they haven't. Look at their smiles! See how easily they chat; how eagerly they go on to some new adventure.

"They couldn't possibly act like that," you say to yourself, "if they felt as I feel!"

But you're wrong, stranger.

EVERYTHING THAT YOU ARE FEELING, SOMEBODY ELSE HAS FELT, SOMEBODY ELSE IS FEELING RIGHT AT THIS MOMENT.

Those smiling faces are a mask.

Your face, also, wears a smile which you know to be a mask. Your real life isn't lived in the open, there in your smiling lips or in your busy hands. All that is just a cover-up. Your real life is lived behind all that, in the secret places of your spirit, alone with your Self.

And what is true of you, is true of all those millions of other beings who, you think, cannot understand. Their real life is also lived in secret.

AND THE THINGS THAT ARE HAPPENING TO YOU IN YOUR SECRET LIFE ARE ALSO HAPPENING TO THEM.

You are not alone. The things you feel are not personal. They are part of all human experience.

How do I know? By my own experience.

Once I, too, felt as you are feeling now. I have had a difficult and painful life, crowded with tragic experiences; and the most tragic of all was that constant sense of loneliness, the feeling that nobody else had suffered as I was suffering; nobody else had ever been so bewildered, so discouraged, so empty.

And then I took this job.

And each day, across my desk and into my office, flowed the record of hundreds of other lives. Letters and letters—some written arrogantly on beautiful white paper; some scrawled recklessly on smeared scraps. Faces and faces—some worn defiantly on healthy, strong bodies; some worn like scars on huddles of shamed flesh. Yet each letter and each face revealing its record of a human life.

AND EACH LETTER AND EACH FACE REVEALING THE SAME RECORD—THE IDENTICAL SYMPTOMS OF FEAR AND HATE AND HUNGER AND DESPAIR!

Amazing. Thousands of letters and faces, so dissimilar on the surface, so similar behind the mask. And, most amazing of all, there in those records I found my own record, which I had thought was so difficult, so secret, so peculiar and personal!

For years I had gone through life feeling that I was all alone, and now I found that I had never been alone. Always those invisible millions had walked with me, dreamed with me, despaired with me!

This discovery, of course, should have been a great comfort, but it wasn't. At first, I'll confess, it made me a little mad. I found I had been getting a doleful thrill out of thinking that I was the world's exclusive sufferer, and now I didn't want to admit, I really resented the fact that I wasn't exclusive at all!

But that conceit passed presently, and then comfort came. It has never left me since. No matter what happens to me now, I know that I am not alone. I know that all the rest of the world walks with me.

That knowledge is my richest possession. It opens the door for me into every hurt heart. It helps to heal my own hurt.

Introducing Ogden Mills to the West

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The Middle West and West will be interested to learn that the Hoover "Administration of all the Failures" has decided to send Ogden Mills into the land of the "sons of the wild jackass" to instruct them on the advantages of Wall Street domination.

It should be of vast educational value to Mr. Mills. He has never concerned himself with the kind of people he will see west of Pittsburgh. They are not his kind of people. And the people out there will hear things from him that they have seldom heard.

Mr. Mills belongs to the aristocracy of money. He is enormously rich. He has his full share of that arrogance which too frequently goes with the pride of the purse, along with a contempt for the average man. So little does he understand the psychology of ordinary mortals that when he went to Maine to instruct the shrewd Easterners he traveled in his private yacht.

Never in his political life has he given a moment's serious thought to the plight of the farmers of the West any more than to the interest of the working classes in the East. He firmly believes in the autocratic concept of government. He stands for the Hamiltonian ideal of government by "the rich and well born." That leaves most of us out.

* * *

The Voice of The Plutocracy

Yet Ogden Mills is an able man, and a good fighter. He was strong enough, at Chicago, with the countenance of the President, and with the aid of the almost 300 official retainers of the administration on the floor, to whip a majority of the delegates to a frazzle in the prohibition fight. After the New York delegation had elected him a member of the Resolutions Committee and instructed him how to vote, he brushed his instructions aside with a supercilious disdain and did the opposite.

While not an eloquent man in any sense—without deep human sympathy there can be no eloquence—he is a strong speaker. He talks with force. It is with the kind of force with which an overseer gives orders to his underlings. His forensic ability is the sort that shines best at a board of directors' meeting. He is more concerned with stocks and bonds than with men. He represents market-minded statesmanship in full flower. More than any other man in public life today he is the Voice of the Plutocracy.

Recalls Elihu Root's Speech

Some years ago Elihu Root, making an attack in the Senate on a measure which shifted some of the burdens of the masses to the very rich, spoke impassionately of "my people." Senator Lewis pounced upon the expression and rang the charges on it. Were the poor in the lower East Side in New York "my people?" Or the workers in the factories? Or the farmers in the fields?

It was such a serious disclosure of the point of view of the aristocratic school of political thought that when the Root speech was published in the Record he had been permitted to change the expression to "my constituents," making Lewis' speech seem to the future reader without meaning.

Mr. Mellon is of the same school of thought—everyone knows who his people are; and Mr. Mills as well. Imagine Ogden Mills pleading ever so insinuatingly for "my people" in the West, where 800,000 farms were foreclosed last year; where millions were wrecked in the market on the misleading assurances of his department; where millions more are in the streets, denied their right to work!

* * *

No Wizard at His Job

Like the "greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Hamilton," Mr. Mills is by no means a wizard at his job. One of the difficulties Congress had in framing a revenue measure to balance the budget was the evident ignorance of Mr. Mills as to how much would be required. One day he announced that $920,000,000 would do. Congress planned to raise this amount.

Then Mr. Mills appeared to say that he guessed it would have to be $1,241,000,000. The weary Congress had its work to do over again.

And then he appeared again to say he had guessed wrong again—and through the Mills blunders Congress was kept in a state of constant confusion resulting in delays.

And then, with an arrogance supreme, Mr. Mills criticized Congress for the delay. That sort of thing is possible only with people conscious of their superiority.

* * *

Mr. Mills' Opinion Of Roosevelt Proposals

The West will be glad to know Mr. Mills' opinion of certain proposals of Mr. Roosevelt.

The latter proposes that every effort be made to prevent the issue of "manufactured and unnecessary securities which are brought out merely for the purpose of enriching those who handle their sale to the public."

Mr. Roosevelt proposes that in the floating of legitimate securities the public, asked to buy, shall have full information "as to the investment of principal, as to the true earnings, true liabilities and true assets of the corporation itself.

Mr. Roosevelt demands that there shall be a more rigid supervision of national banks and Mr. Mills, during whose regime in the Treasury more banks have failed than ever before in history, is not pleased.

* * *

More Disagreements Between Them

And there are more disagreements between them.

Mr. Roosevelt is against the unrestrained use of bank deposits in speculation; and Mr. Mills, whose regime actually was a hawker for such speculation with its false statements of business conditions, is naturally hostile to the thought.

Mr. Roosevelt would separate commercial and investment banking as a matter of public policy; Mr. Mills would not.

Mr. Roosevelt would restore the Federal Reserve System to its original functions, and Mr. Mills, under whose regime it has been prostituted to other purposes to the nation's cost, cannot see the need.

Mr. Roosevelt's position on the protection of the public in public utility matters and on power is the very opposite to that of Mr. Mills.

Moses Said What Mills Thinks

Now Mr. Mills is not a contemptible figure by any means. He is a very able man. Temperamentally, instinctively, by environment, association and training he has the aristocratic, anti-democratic, plutocratic concept of government. Of all men living, he would seem the last man to send to the Middle West and West. He personifies in his politics the element that has used agriculture as a football for the amusement of the privileged for two generations.

To have made the Mills tour complete, it should have been arranged that Senator Moses should accompany him and amplify on his "sons of the wild jackass." For Moses said what Mills thinks. On that subject they are "two minds with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one."
